COOLIDGE DYNASTY DRAWS TO END

MEXICANS OFF FOR WASHINGTON

ATTEMPT NON-STOP FLIGHT TO CAPITAL FROM MEXICO CITY

Brilliant Take-Off Gives Flyers Good Start

MEXICO CITY, March 2.—Joaquin Gonzalez Pacheco and C. E. McMillan started on a non-stop flight from Mexico City to Washington at 6:45 a. m. today and made a brilliant take-off with 500 gallons of gasoline.

By lifting their Stinson Detroiter into the air with such a heavy load, they set a record for this altitude. The plane started from the Valbuena flying field and ran for a mile, gathering high speed, before it rose slowly into the air and began to climb. The fliers still had to rise another 2,000 feet, with load largely unimpaired to clear the mountains enroute to Tampico.

If Pacheco and McMillan succeed it will be the first non-stop flight from here to Washington. A flight from Washington to Mexico City was accomplished in 1927, by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Pacheco and McMillan probably will follow the approximate route of Lindbergh.

Pacheco is a Mexican civil aviator and McMillan an American air mail pilot. They carried letters from Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow to Mr. Hoover and Secretary of State Kellog.

McMillan was at the controls as the flight started, but the two planned to alternate during the journey. The fliers should reach Washington at about 10 a. m. Sunday. The plane is named the Emilio Carranza, in honor of the Mexican army flier who was forced down on an attempted flight from Mexico City to Washington last year, and was killed on his return flight from New York.

EXPANSION OF BANK CREDIT SUBJECT OF FEDERAL WARNING

Financial Trouble May Follow Says Annual Report

WASHINGTON, March 2. — A further warning against too rapid expansion of bank credit was sounded today by the federal reserve board's annual report which said it is the board's duty to restrain undue growth of credit "in any direction."

Reserve bank credit, the report pointed out, is the base of the entire credit structure and the board's responsibility for credit conditions is, therefore, correspondingly broad.

"Too rapid expansion of bank credit in any field may result in serious financial disorganization and it inevitably leads to increased demand for reserve bank funds," it added.

"Because the system has a broad responsibility for the general soundness of credit conditions, and because a growth of bank credit for any purpose ultimately leads to a demand for reserve bank credit, it is its duty to use its influence against undue credit expansion and direction."

Attention has been centered recently on the reserve system's credit policy because of its recent warning against use of reserve credit to maintain speculation. The annual report, though covering activities of 1928, sheds light on the board's present policy.

Objectives of the reserve board's credit policy, as defined in the report, were "continuous provision of credit at reasonable cost in amounts adequate for the requirements of trade and industry and the safeguarding of our gold reserves."

Securities, the report said, now underlie more than half the outstanding volume of member bank credit.

Citing the courses open to the board in any effort to control the credit situation, the report said:

"It is certain, however, that the reserve system must steer its course with reference to broader developments and longer time objectives than day-to-day or month-to-month changes in any particular line of credit."

PATRONS FLEE THEATER FIRE

EAST PALESTINE, O., March 2.—More than 200 patrons of the Liberty Theater here hastily left the building last night when fire was discovered back stage.

No one was injured in the escape, but the fire which followed caused a loss estimated today at $15,000. Adjoining buildings were menaced for a time.

FOUR PERISH IN FIRE FROM GAS EXPLOSION

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 2.—Four members of a family were burned to death and a fifth was burned so severely he may die, when fire, caused by a gas well explosion, destroyed their home at Gould Station, near here early today.

The victims were Mrs. Dora Prim, 45; Charles Crawford, 24; Mrs. Anna Crawford, 22, daughter of Mrs. Prim, and Otis Crawford, eight-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Crawford.

Mrs. Prim's husband, William, 46, was found lying a short distance from the smouldering ruins. He was removed to a hospital where physicians said his recovery was doubtful.

LIKE ANY OTHER DAY

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Herbert Hover's last day as a private citizen was about like any other day for him.

He spent the day quietly at home with his family, devoting himself to resting and clearing his desk.

The president-elect arose at seven o'clock as usual and had breakfast with his family at eight. After breakfast he retired to his study to confer with Senator Schall, Minnesota, who called at nine o'clock, devoting the time afterward until lunch at one o'clock in going over his papers and arranging final details of his inauguration.

The only other caller scheduled was Governor Myers Y. Cooper of Ohio, who had an appointment at 2:30. The president-elect and Mrs. Hoover planned a long automobile ride into the country in the afternoon. Only the family was expected at dinner at eight.

PRESIDENT-ELECT NAMES ARTHUR HYDE AGRICULTURE HEAD

Former Governor Of Missouri Is From Lowden Camp

(BULLETIN)

WASHINGTON, March 2.—President-elect Hoover's cabinet was completed today with the announcement that Robert Patterson Lamont of Chicago, head of a large steel foundry, will be secretary of commerce.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—President-Elect Hoover spent his last regular day as a private citizen today for some time at least.

He devoted himself to resting, with his family about him, and clearing up a few last minute matters, while official Washington sought to learn the identity of the only member of the cabinet not hitherto revealed, secretary of commerce, the post he filled for seven-and-a-half years.

The other "surprise" cabinet member is former Governor Arthur M. Hyde, of Missouri, who will be secretary of agriculture. This selection was revealed last night, checking for the moment a frenzy of speculation here unequalled before in similar circumstances and with humorous aspects.

Mr. Hoover draws from the camp of his leading pre-convention foe, former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, in bringing Hyde into his official family. Hyde supported Lowden for the presidential nomination.

Hyde, who is 51, has participated in farm relief movements. Lowden was champion of the McNary-Haugen bill which Mr. Hoover refused to espouse. The selection came as a distinct surprise to official Washington.

He is a native of Missouri, graduated from the University of Michigan and took a law degree at Iowa State University. He was governor from 1921 to 1925. His home now is in Trenton, Mo.

Missouri, always a doubtful state, thus retains the representation in the new cabinet which she had in the retiring cabinet in the person of Dwight F. Davis, secretary of war.

With but two days remaining before he becomes president, Mr. Hoover went about his business today quietly and calmly.

He arose at his regular hour today, seven o'clock, had his breakfast at eight, and conducted himself as if this were merely another day. His calling list included but two people, Senator Schall of Minnesota and Governor Myers Y. Cooper of Ohio.

During the day, the president-elect will clear up his desk in the study of his home and close it, preparatory to moving his home and his business headquarters from 2300 S Street to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. He will resume business in the White House executive offices promptly at nine o'clock Tuesday morning, holding his first cabinet meeting at 10:30.

The next president and Mrs. Hoover will be guests of the president and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House tomorrow evening. After the parade Monday the president will retire to the White House.

APPOINTMENTS OF COOLIDGE DYING AS CONGRESS EXPIRES

Twenty Nominations Are Shelved; Session Is Peaceful

WASHINGTON, March 2.—For six years President Coolidge has been unable to get along with the senate in the matter of appointments and now with congress peacefully dying and Mr. Coolidge quietly returning to private life, they are still at odds.

More than twenty Coolidge nominations to important offices are to be shelved according to the plans of senate leaders. The names submitted by the president will die with the congress at noon Monday. They include eight judgeships and numerous lesser offices and such personages as Secretary of Navy Curtis D. Wilbur, offered as judge of the ninth California circuit and former Senator Irwin L. Lenroot, Wisconsin, named to be judge of the United State Court of Customs Appeals.

Groups of senators have been aroused at the haste of the chief executive in naming six new federal judges under the bill which passed congress only a few hours before the names were submitted by Mr. Coolidge. In the ordinary course of events, the names might not be submitted by the president for weeks.

If the leaders carry out their plan of ignoring the nominations, President-elect Hoover will have the pleasure of doling out these offices to other parties after he takes the oath.

The leaders have decreed one other will be permitted to go through because of particular circumstances, Allen Cox of Mississippi.

In matters of legislation both houses are further ahead with their business than any short sessions have been in closing hours during recent years. The bill continuing the life of the radio commission was forced through the senate last night after a nine hour filibuster by Senator Copeland, Democrat, New York. Copeland secured adoption of an amendment which provides the commission will function only until December 31, next.

Before recessing shortly before 11 p. m. the senate also adopted house amendments to the Edge resolution authorizing a $150,000 survey of the Nicaraguan canal.

The house sat up late, too, adopting two immigration proposals, one making it a felony for aliens to reenter the country after deportation and the other permitting naturalization of aliens now in the United States who came here before 1921.

The house adjourned ten minutes after the senate upon news of the death of Rep. Weller, Democrat, New York.

JURY UNABLE TO DECIDE ON "ART"

NEW YORK, March 2.—A jury that for four weeks has valiantly tried to absorb technical knowledge of Florentine art gave up the puzzle of the two "La Belle Ferroniers" just before dawn today.

The twelve jurors, ten of whom admitted they knew nothing about art, were discharged by Justice William H. Black in supreme court after they reported they were unable to agree on the question of whether the "La Belle Ferronier" owned by Mrs. Andree Kahn or the one in the Louvre was painted by Leonardo Da Vinci.

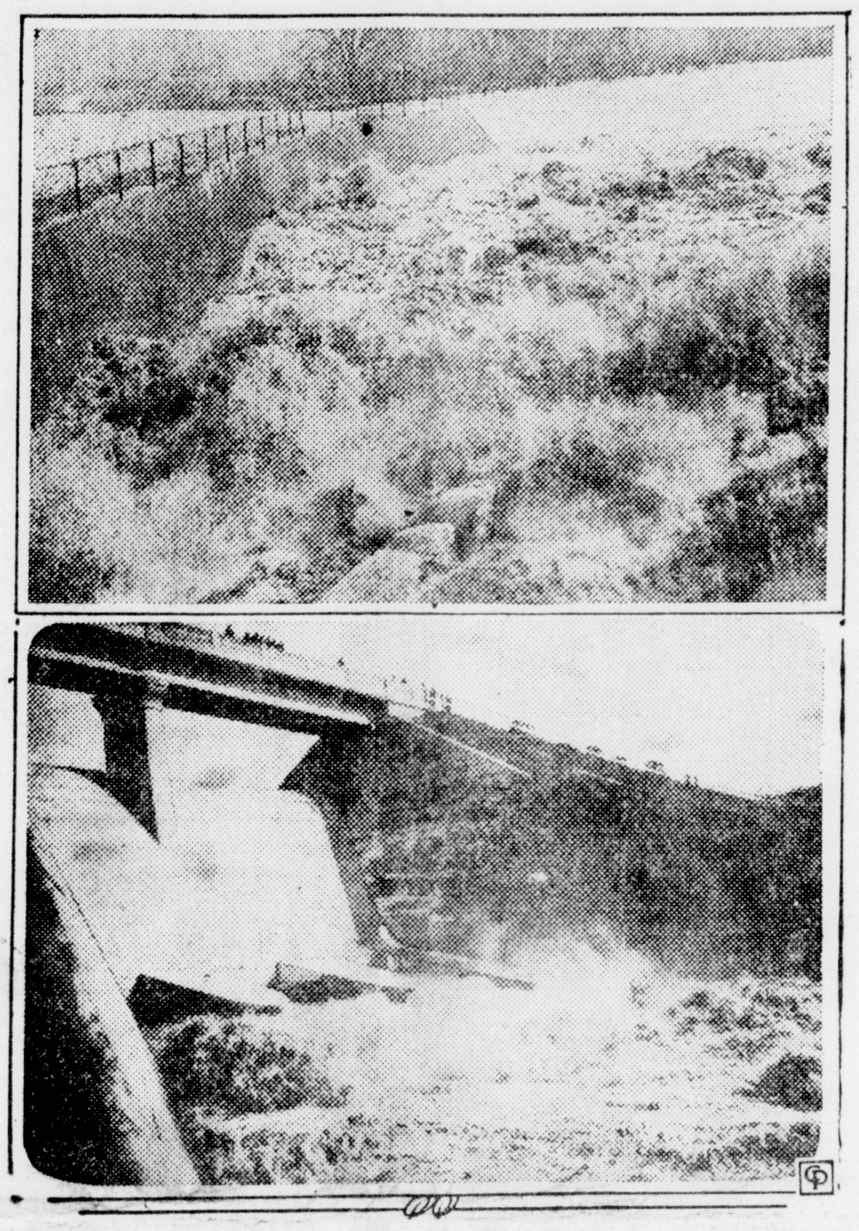
Mrs. Kahn brought suit against Sir Joseph Duveen, internationally known art dealer, charging that when he pronounced her picture a copy of the one in the Louvre, he ruined her chances of selling it to the Kansas City Institute of art. She asked $500,000 damages but in his charge to the jury, Justice Black fixed $250,000 as the maximum damage possible.

WOMAN SUICIDES

NEW COMERSTOWN, March 2.—Despondency was assigned today as the cause of the suicide of Mrs. Mary Norris, 57, who leaped into the swollen waters of Evans Creek and was drowned. The body was recovered. Mrs. Norris' husband, Frank, died last New Year's Day.

RIFT SPLITS PROBE

CONSERVANCY DAMS GET SEVERE TEST



The Miami Conservatory

The Miami Conservancy District dams, near Dayton, built after the disastrous 1913 floods to prevent further flood damage, were given their severest tests during the high water of last Monday night and Tuesday. Many square miles of conservancy land were flooded while the dams automatically controlled the amount permitted to flow down the river channe. Two views above show the dams functioning during the highwater protecting Dayton and other Miami Valley points.

LINDY AND ANN ON WEEK END

Enjoy Romantic Setting Of Morrow Rural Home At Cuernavaca

MEXICO CITY, March 2.—Another week-end in the tropical and romantic setting of Cuernavaca lay before Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Miss Anne Spencer Morrow today.

The two young lovers and the family of Miss Morrow planned to leave today for the Morrow country home, already filled with many pleasant memories of the flier's brief courtship.

Lindbergh, Miss Morrow, her mother, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, wife of the United States ambassador to Mexico, and her sister, Miss Elizabeth Morrow, spent yesterday afternoon at the hacienda, La Gabia, of Antonio Riba Cervantes, one of Mexico's oldest aviation enthusiasts.

Cervantes is 75 years old and was recently granted a pilot's license. He has his own plane and frequently flies from his hacienda to the capital. He was greatly pleased at the opportunity of talking about aviation with the young flier.

The length of the stay at Cuernavaca was not announced but it was expected Lindbergh and the Morrows would return here by Tuesday.

A military guard probably will accompany the party since bandits held up and burned a train in the same state Thursday.

DEATH PENALTY IS EXACTED OF SLAYER

CLEVELAND, March 2.—James T. Nevins, homeless lake sailor, who said he never "got a break in life" faced death in the electric chair today.

Nevins was convicted of first degree murder for the fatal clubbing of Don Prentiss, former executive of a Detroit automobile company, who was killed November 13 while confined in a county jail cell with Nevins.

The jury of eight men and four women did not recommend mercy and their verdict carried with it the death penalty. Trial Judge N. Craig McBride will fix the date of WICK, N. J., March 2. — National

YOUNG ELOPERS RETURNED HOME

CINCINNATI, O., March 2.—Hubert Shelton, 22, and his bride of three days, Florence Lawill Shelton, 14, were turned over to Sheriff Neu of Brown County today.

Neu said the couple ran away from home at Aberdeen, O., Feb. 27. The girl's parents filed warrants charging Shelton with contributing to juvenile delinquency.

CONDITION OF FOCH REMAINS SERIOUS

PARIS, March 2.—Marshal Ferdinand Foch's condition remained unchanged today but his physicians admitted they were worried over the persistance of the pulmonary congestion.

The congestion, in the base of the lungs, was difficult to treat despite tapping.

Foch's temperature this morning was 100.4 and his pulse 92. Dr. Davaniere and Dr. Heitz-Boyer left the Foch residence early last night after examining the aged marshal. They first announced they would spend the night, fearing grave developments, but apparently the examination reassured them.

STATE'S ATTORNEY ASSUMES CHARGE OF CHICAGO MASSACRE

Declare Alibi Of Suspect Smashed By Evidence

CHICAGO, March 2.—The investigation of Chicago's most cold-blooded gang murder—the north side massacre—has resulted in a break between the state's attorney's office and the police department. The investigation was turned entirely over to Assistant State's Attorney David Stansbury today, as Jack McGurn and Rocco Fanelli were called up for formal arraignment on seven charges of murder.

Stansbury declared that McGurn's alibi had been smashed and that he is convinced both McGurn and Fanelli were members of the firing squad. He said new and important evidence had been received, necessitating a thirty-day continuance to prepare the state's case for trial.

Presumably the rift developed because Stansbury declared he by no means had given up his inquiry into whether members of the police force participated in the murders. Deputy Commissioner John Stege refused to commend on the move other than to say it had been deemed advisable for the state's attorney's office to have full charge of the investigation.

McGurn, reputed chief machine gunner for Al Capone and notoriously a tough guy in gangster circles, and Fanelli, mild appearing, bespectacled former bodyguard for Capone, were charged formally late yesterday, one charge being lodged for each of the seven men who were shot down in the massacre.

The blonde artist's model found with McGurn in the Hotel Stevens when he was arrested, Louise Rolfe, was booked on a disorderly conduct charge.

STUDER ACQUITTED OF LIQUOR CHARGE

CANTON, O., March 2.—Carl Studer, paroled penitentiary convict and a stormy figure in the investigation of the murder of Editor Don R. Mellett in 1926, was free today after facing the possibility of return to prison for violation of his parole. He pleaded not guilty in municipal court late yesterday to a charge of possession of liquor, and was found not guilty by Judge U. S. Johnston "because of insufficient evidence."

Studer was arrested last Saturday night with Abe Brennan in a raid on a speakeasy. He denied partnership in the liquor dispensary, although police said they found keys to the place in his pocket and that he begged them not to arrest him "because it'll mean back to the pen for me."

TWENTY FIVE PEOPLE STARVE

VIENNA, March 2.—Twenty-five persons starved to death during the month the Galician village of Zavaje was snowbound, it was reported today in advices from Zagreb.

Rescue parties reached the town yesterday after a month of digging through huge snowdrifts. All of the inhabitants still living were in a state of extreme exhaustion.

FACE POLICE QUIZ

Jack McGurn, below, member of "Scarface Al" Capone's gang in Chicago, faces a formal charge of murder in connection with the St. Valentine Day Massacre of seven members of the George (Bugs) Moran gang in a Chicago garage. McGurn was arrested in a Chicago hotel with Louise Rolfe, top, who was held for questioning.

LONE BANDIT STEALS $1,400

CLEVELAND, O., March 2.—A lone robber held up the Union Savings and Loan Company here today and escaped with $1,400. The company is in the center of the downtown district and the street was crowded with early shoppers when the holdup occurred.

A number of customers were in the bank. The man walked up to a teller's window behind which was George R. Prentice, assistant secretary.

Prentice found himself facing a pistol in the man's hand. He was ordered to hand over the money Prentice obeyed. The man ordered him to make no outcry.

The robber walked away from the window, mingled with those in the place and no person was able to say how he departed.

The customers were unaware that a holdup had taken place. Police squads responded to the burglar alarm call.

BANDITS ATTEMPT TO ROB WRONG MAN

CINCINNATI, O., March 2.—Five bandits made the mistake of holding up John Rinck, a cafe owner, here early today and four of them were captured after Rinck and police pursued them.

Shortly after the bandits entered the restaurant police were drawn to the scene. The robbers fled, closely pursued by Rinck who jumped into his car and gave chase.

Rinck was attempting to force the men to the curb when another policeman appeared. The latter captured two of the men and another officer captured a third later.

The fourth robber—who had rented the bandit car at a downtown agency—was arrested at a hotel.

The men held registered as Franklin Bridgett, 21; Clarence Martz, 23; Leo J. Doamis, 29, and Norman O'Bannion, 20.

STEWART CLOSES FIGHT TO HOLD CONTROL WITH GLOWING APPEAL

NEW YORK, March 2.—Col. Robert W. Stewart brought his campaign for re-election to the board of the Standard Oil Co., of Indiana to a close today with an appeal to "the voters" that savored of the day-before-election statements of candidates for the presidency.

With the vigor of a William Jennings Bryan he attacked the "greatest accumulation of wealth on earth"—the Rockefellers—and he "pointed with pride" to the fruits of his administration.

The Stewart statement was signed by the "protective" committee which has had charge of his campaign and was addressed to all of the 58,000 stockholders of the company. It reminded them that the value of their investments in Standard Oil has increased three fold in ten years and that more than 50 per cent of the billion-dollar company's earnings had been distributed to the 58,000 "voters."

COP OUTSMARTS TWO VISITING "BAD MEN"

BROOKLYN, March 2.—Two hold-up men, one from Chicago and the other from Philadelphia, were arrested single handed by a Brooklyn policeman early today after the Philadelphia bad-man had cornered the officer in a dark cellar and had pressed a revolver against his neck.

"Better give up now," the cornered policeman told the hold-up man, "If I don't get you down here my partner will when you get outside."

"My hands are up," said the bandit as a revolver clattered on the stone floor and Policeman Arthur Irwin grasped his collar and led him out.

Although Irwin had no partner, he had previously felled the companion of his captive with his night stick at the entrance to a confectionery and left the proprietor's son to guard the unconscious form, armed with his night stick.

The outwitted captive gave the name of Dominick McDermott, 23, of Philadelphia, and the unconscious one, upon revival said he was Dominick Costello, 20, just arrived from Chicago.

HOOVER SUN RISING AS ADMINISTRATION CHANGES MONDAY

Silent New Englander Yields To Product Of Machine Age

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

WASHINGTON, March 2—The sun sets tonight upon the administration of Calvin Coolidge, the last of the Yankees.

Herbert Hoover, the fair-haired son of the new machine age, the world famous engineer and administrator, who eight years ago was so ignorant of politics that he said he did not know whether he was a Republican or a Democrat, moves into the White House Monday noon.

With Hoover comes a new period in American public affairs. Mr. Coolidge, the economical, cautious-footed New Englander, applied a cold towel to the head of a nation still suffering a hangover from intoxication of the World War.

Now comes Mr. Hoover the nation's most famous globe trotter with great projects for advancing the strength and glory of the nation—such as his project for a new canal across Nicaragua and the development of a system of internal waterways, his plans for restoring the farmers to normal prosperity.

The change of administrations, the nearest thing to a coronation this democratic nation can stage, will be marked this time by a greater display of pageantry than in many years. This despite the simple Quaker tastes of Mr. Hoover and his request for a modest inaugural ceremony. Washington is already crowded with visitors.

Congress, grinding through dreary night sessions while individual members squabble over whose petty private measures shall get through the last-minute jam, will adjourn Monday noon only to come back with a month or six weeks to undertake the momentous tasks of revising the tariff and enacting farm relief legislation at the direction of Mr. Hoover.

The silent little man from New England, refusing to make a "farewell" address to the American people because—he told friends this week—George Washington made one that is still adequate, will board a train immediately after his successor is sworn in and go back to his small $32 a month rented duplex in Northampton. He will live as he did when Mrs. Coolidge did her own housework and darned the stockings of her boys before the succession of events made him first vice president and then president.

Coolidge leaves Washington the same enigmatical character which has piqued the curiosity of this gossips' heaven for eight years. Asked yesterday what had been the greatest accomplishment of his administration, Mr. Coolidge made known he believed it was that he had been consistently successful in minding his own business. That's Coolidge.

When Mr. Coolidge was entering the Massachusetts legislature in 1907, starting his slow climb up the political ladder, Mr. Hoover, two years younger, had spent several years as a mining engineer in China and Australia as managing director for the largest engineering firms in the world.

Mr. Coolidge has held public office almost continuously since hanging out his shingle in Northampton. Hoover never ran for office until last year. Coolidge always was a regular organization man. Hoover was a complete outsider.

Coolidge let his cabinet run his administration. Hoover will be his own cabinet. He intends to make many reforms in the government administration. It is Mr. Hoover's hope that the federal machinery, which he regards in some respects as belonging to the pre-automobile age, can be brought up-to-date. Many innovations already have been planned in the handling of affairs at the White House where there has been little change in a quarter of a century.

To many familiar with Woodrow Wilson, resemblances are seen in Hoover. Washington expects many surprises and the mystery over the last unannounced cabinet member is typical of the expectancy which Mr. Hoover has aroused as to his entire administration.

As a presidential candidate and as president-elect Mr. Hoover has been closely studied by politicians here. They have wondered whether Mr. Hoover would, to use the technical term, "play ball" with them. They usually found Mr. Coolidge satisfactory in this respect.

Many of the political tribe await the advent of Mr. Hoover with some uneasiness. Many of the boys in the cloakrooms of congress who have large families to support and who are trying to get along regard Mr. Hoover somewhat as "a noble experiment" and they are waiting to see how everything works out.

Before recessing shortly before 11 p. m. the senate also adopted house amendments to the Edge resolution authorizing a $150,000 survey of the Nicaraguan canal.

The house sat up late, too, adopting two immigration proposals, one making it a felony for aliens to reenter the country after deportation and the other permitting naturalization of aliens now in the United States who came here before 1921.

The house adjourned ten minutes after the senate upon news of the death of Rep. Weller, Democrat, New York.

JURY UNABLE TO DECIDE ON "ART"

NEW YORK, March 2.—A jury that for four weeks has valiantly tried to absorb technical knowledge of Florentine art gave up the puzzle of the two "La Belle Ferroniers" just before dawn today.

The twelve jurors, ten of whom admitted they knew nothing about art, were discharged by Justice William H. Black in supreme court after they reported they were unable to agree on the question of whether the "La Belle Ferronier" owned by Mrs. Andree Kahn or the one in the Louvre was painted by Leonardo Da Vinci.

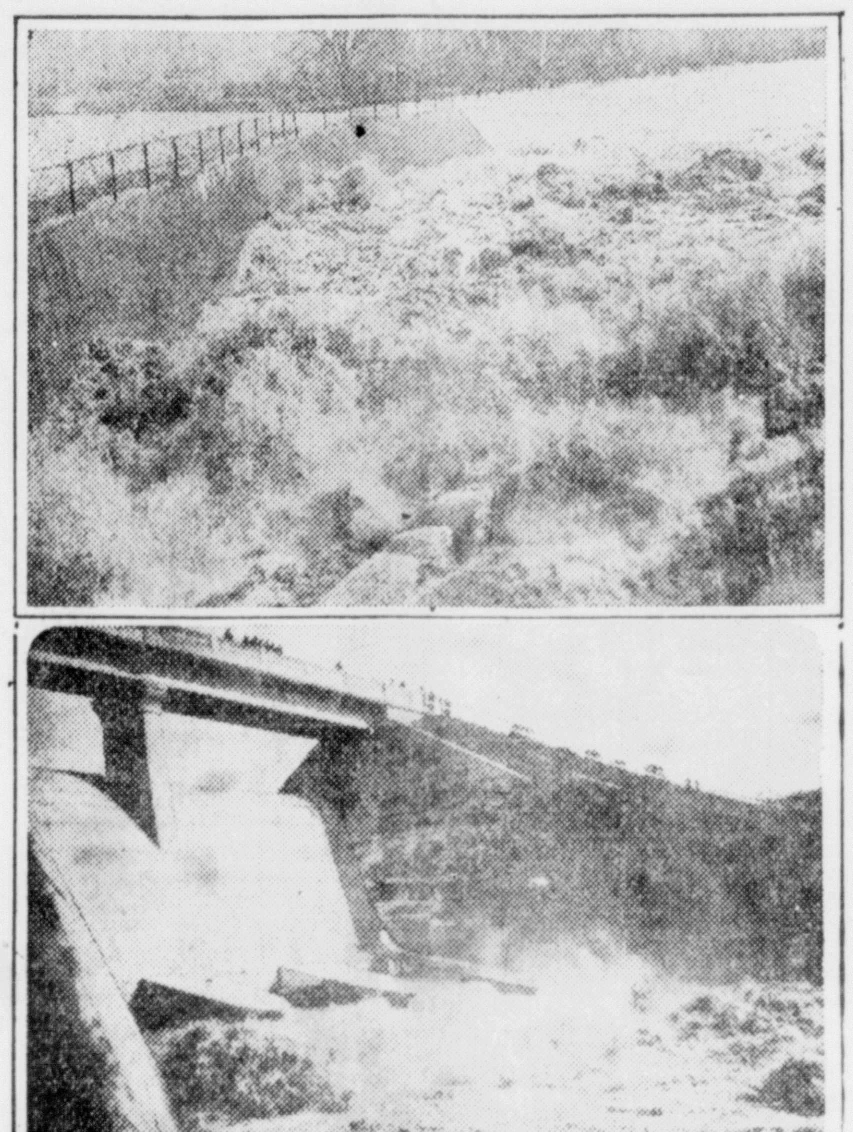
Mrs. Kahn brought suit against Sir Joseph Duveen, internationally known art dealer, charging that when he pronounced her picture a copy of the one in the Louvre, he ruined her chances of selling it to the Kansas City Institute of art. She asked $500,000 damages but in his charge to the jury, Justice Black fixed $250,000 as the maximum damage possible.

WOMAN SUICIDES

NEW COMERSTOWN, March 2.—Despondency was assigned today as the cause of the suicide of Mrs. Mary Norris, 57, who leaped into the swollen waters of Evans Creek and was drowned. The body was recovered. Mrs. Norris' husband, Frank, died last New Year's Day.

RIFT SPLITS PROBE

CONSERVANCY DAMS GET SEVERE TEST



The Miami Conservatory

The Miami Conservancy District dams, near Dayton, built after the disastrous 1913 floods to prevent further flood damage, were given their severest tests during the high water of last Monday night and Tuesday. Many square miles of conservancy land were flooded while the dams automatically controlled the amount permitted to flow down the river channe. Two views above show the dams functioning during the highwater protecting Dayton and other Miami Valley points.

Enjoy Romantic Setting Of Morrow Rural Home At Cuernavaca

MEXICO CITY, March 2.—Another week-end in the tropical and romantic setting of Cuernavaca lay before Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Miss Anne Spencer Morrow today.

The two young lovers and the family of Miss Morrow planned to leave today for the Morrow country home, already filled with many pleasant memories of the flier's brief courtship.

Lindbergh, Miss Morrow, her mother, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, wife of the United States ambassador to Mexico, and her sister, Miss Elizabeth Morrow, spent yesterday afternoon at the hacienda, La Gabia, of Antonio Riba Cervantes, one of Mexico's oldest aviation enthusiasts.

Cervantes is 75 years old and was recently granted a pilot's license. He has his own plane and frequently flies from his hacienda to the capital. He was greatly pleased at the opportunity of talking about aviation with the young flier.

The length of the stay at Cuernavaca was not announced but it was expected Lindbergh and the Morrows would return here by Tuesday.

A military guard probably will accompany the party since bandits held up and burned a train in the same state Thursday.

DEATH PENALTY IS EXACTED OF SLAYER

CLEVELAND, March 2.—James T. Nevins, homeless lake sailor, who said he never "got a break in life" faced death in the electric chair today.

Nevins was convicted of first degree murder for the fatal clubbing of Don Prentiss, former executive of a Detroit automobile company, who was killed November 13 while confined in a county jail cell with Nevins.

The jury of eight men and four women did not recommend mercy and their verdict carried with it the death penalty. Trial Judge N. Craig McBride will fix the date of WICK, N. J., March 2. — National

YOUNG ELOPERS RETURNED HOME

CINCINNATI, O., March 2.—Hubert Shelton, 22, and his bride of three days, Florence Lawill Shelton, 14, were turned over to Sheriff Neu of Brown County today.

Neu said the couple ran away from home at Aberdeen, O., Feb. 27. The girl's parents filed warrants charging Shelton with contributing to juvenile delinquency.

CONDITION OF FOCH REMAINS SERIOUS

PARIS, March 2.—Marshal Ferdinand Foch's condition remained unchanged today but his physicians admitted they were worried over the persistance of the pulmonary congestion.

The congestion, in the base of the lungs, was difficult to treat despite tapping.

Foch's temperature this morning was 100.4 and his pulse 92. Dr. Davaniere and Dr. Heitz-Boyer left the Foch residence early last night after examining the aged marshal. They first announced they would spend the night, fearing grave developments, but apparently the examination reassured them.

COP OUTSMARTS TWO VISITING "BAD MEN"

BROOKLYN, March 2.—Two hold-up men, one from Chicago and the other from Philadelphia, were arrested single handed by a Brooklyn policeman early today after the Philadelphia bad-man had cornered the officer in a dark cellar and had pressed a revolver against his neck.

"Better give up now," the cornered policeman told the hold-up man, "If I don't get you down here my partner will when you get outside."

"My hands are up," said the bandit as a revolver clattered on the stone floor and Policeman Arthur Irwin grasped his collar and led him out.

Although Irwin had no partner, he had previously felled the companion of his captive with his night stick at the entrance to a confectionery and left the proprietor's son to guard the unconscious form, armed with his night stick.

The outwitted captive gave the name of Dominick McDermott, 23, of Philadelphia, and the unconscious one, upon revival said he was Dominick Costello, 20, just arrived from Chicago.

STATE'S ATTORNEY ASSUMES CHARGE OF CHICAGO MASSACRE

Declare Alibi Of Suspect Smashed By Evidence

CHICAGO, March 2.—The investigation of Chicago's most cold-blooded gang murder—the north side massacre—has resulted in a break between the state's attorney's office and the police department. The investigation was turned entirely over to Assistant State's Attorney David Stansbury today, as Jack McGurn and Rocco Fanelli were called up for formal arraignment on seven charges of murder.

Stansbury declared that McGurn's alibi had been smashed and that he is convinced both McGurn and Fanelli were members of the firing squad. He said new and important evidence had been received, necessitating a thirty-day continuance to prepare the state's case for trial.

Presumably the rift developed because Stansbury declared he by no means had given up his inquiry into whether members of the police force participated in the murders. Deputy Commissioner John Stege refused to commend on the move other than to say it had been deemed advisable for the state's attorney's office to have full charge of the investigation.

McGurn, reputed chief machine gunner for Al Capone and notoriously a tough guy in gangster circles, and Fanelli, mild appearing, bespectacled former bodyguard for Capone, were charged formally late yesterday, one charge being lodged for each of the seven men who were shot down in the massacre.

The blonde artist's model found with McGurn in the Hotel Stevens when he was arrested, Louise Rolfe, was booked on a disorderly conduct charge.

STUDER ACQUITTED OF LIQUOR CHARGE

CANTON, O., March 2.—Carl Studer, paroled penitentiary convict and a stormy figure in the investigation of the murder of Editor Don R. Mellett in 1926, was free today after facing the possibility of return to prison for violation of his parole. He pleaded not guilty in municipal court late yesterday to a charge of possession of liquor, and was found not guilty by Judge U. S. Johnston "because of insufficient evidence."

Studer was arrested last Saturday night with Abe Brennan in a raid on a speakeasy. He denied partnership in the liquor dispensary, although police said they found keys to the place in his pocket and that he begged them not to arrest him "because it'll mean back to the pen for me."

TWENTY FIVE PEOPLE STARVE

VIENNA, March 2.—Twenty-five persons starved to death during the month the Galician village of Zavaje was snowbound, it was reported today in advices from Zagreb.

Rescue parties reached the town yesterday after a month of digging through huge snowdrifts. All of the inhabitants still living were in a state of extreme exhaustion.

STEWART CLOSE S FIGHT TO HOLD CONTROL WITH GLOWING APPEAL

NEW YORK, March 2.—Col. Robert W. Stewart brought his campaign for re-election to the board of the Standard Oil Co., of Indiana to a close today with an appeal to "the voters" that savored of the day-before-election statements of candidates for the presidency.

With the vigor of a William Jennings Bryan he attacked the "greatest accumulation of wealth on earth"—the Rockefellers—and he "pointed with pride" to the fruits of his administration.

The Stewart statement was signed by the "protective" committee which has had charge of his campaign and was addressed to all of the 58,000 stockholders of the company. It reminded them that the value of their investments in Standard Oil has increased three fold in ten years and that more than 50 per cent of the billion-dollar company's earnings had been distributed to the 58,000 "voters."

FACE POLICE QUIZ

Jack McGurn, below, member of "Scarface Al" Capone's gang in Chicago, faces a formal charge of murder in connection with the St. Valentine Day Massacre of seven members of the George (Bugs) Moran gang in a Chicago garage. McGurn was arrested in a Chicago hotel with Louise Rolfe, top, who was held for questioning.

LONE BANDIT STEALS $1,400

CLEVELAND, O., March 2.—A lone robber held up the Union Savings and Loan Company here today and escaped with $1,400. The company is in the center of the downtown district and the street was crowded with early shoppers when the holdup occurred.

A number of customers were in the bank. The man walked up to a teller's window behind which was George R. Prentice, assistant secretary.

Prentice found himself facing a pistol in the man's hand. He was ordered to hand over the money. Prentice obeyed. The man ordered him to make no outcry.

The robber walked away from the window, mingled with those in the place and no person was able to say how he departed.

The customers were unaware that a holdup had taken place. Police squads responded to the burglar alarm call.

BANDITS ATTEMPT TO ROB WRONG MAN

CINCINNATI, O., March 2.—Five bandits made the mistake of holding up John Rinck, a cafe owner, here early today and four of them were captured after Rinck and police pursued them.

Shortly after the bandits entered the restaurant police were drawn to the scene. The robbers fled, closely pursued by Rinck who jumped into his car and gave chase.

Rinck was attempting to force the men to the curb when another policeman appeared. The latter captured two of the men and another officer captured a third later.

The fourth robber—who had rented the bandit car at a downtown agency—was arrested at a hotel.

The men held registered as Franklin Bridgett, 21; Clarence Martz, 23; Leo J. Doamis, 29, and Norman O'Bannion, 20.

HOOVER SUN RISING AS ADMINISTRATION CHANGES MONDAY

Silent New Englander Yields To Product Of Machine Age

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

WASHINGTON, March 2—The sun sets tonight upon the administration of Calvin Coolidge, the last of the Yankees.

Herbert Hoover, the fair-haired son of the new machine age, the world famous engineer and administrator, who eight years ago was so ignorant of politics that he said he did not know whether he was a Republican or a Democrat, moves into the White House Monday noon.

With Hoover comes a new period in American public affairs. Mr. Coolidge, the economical, cautious footed New Englander, applied a cold towel to the head of a nation still suffering a hangover from intoxication of the World War.

Now comes Mr. Hoover the nation's most famous globe trotter with great projects for advancing the strength and glory of the nation—such as his project for a new canal across Nicaragua and the development of a system of internal waterways, his plans for restoring the farmers to normal prosperity.

The change of administrations, the nearest thing to a coronation this democratic nation can stage, will be marked this time by a greater display of pageantry than in many years. This despite the simple Quaker tastes of Mr. Hoover and his request for a modest inaugural ceremony. Washington is already crowded with visitors.

Congress, grinding through dreary night sessions while individual members squabble over whose petty private measures shall get through the last-minute jam, will adjourn Monday noon only to come back with a month or six weeks to undertake the momentous tasks of revising the tariff and enacting farm relief legislation at the direction of Mr. Hoover.

The silent little man from New England, refusing to make a "farewell" address to the American people because—he told friends this week—George Washington made one that is still adequate, will board a train immediately after his successor is sworn in and go back to his small $32 a month rented duplex in Northampton. He will live as he did when Mrs. Coolidge did her own housework and darned the stockings of her boys before the succession of events made him first vice president and then president.

Coolidge leaves Washington the same enigmatical character which has piqued the curiosity of this gossips' heaven for eight years. Asked yesterday what had been the greatest accomplishment of his administration, Mr. Coolidge made known he believed it was that he had been consistently successful in minding his own business. That's Coolidge.

When Mr. Coolidge was entering the Massachusetts legislature in 1907, starting his slow climb up the political ladder, Mr. Hoover, two years younger, had spent several years as a mining engineer in China and Australia as managing director for the largest engineering firms in the world.

Mr. Coolidge has held public office almost continuously since hanging out his shingle in Northampton. Hoover never ran for office until last year. Coolidge always was a regular organization man. Hoover was a complete outsider.

Coolidge let his cabinet run his administration. Hoover will be his own cabinet. He intends to make many reforms in the government administration. It is Mr. Hoover's hope that the federal machinery, which he regards in some respects as belonging to the pre-automobile age, can be brought up-to-date. Many innovations already have been planned in the handling of affairs at the White House where there has been little change in a quarter of a century.

To many familiar with Woodrow Wilson, resemblances are seen in Hoover. Washington expects many surprises and the mystery over the last unannounced cabinet member is typical of the expectancy which Mr. Hoover has aroused as to his entire administration.

As a presidential candidate and as president-elect Mr. Hoover has been closely studied by politicians here. They have wondered whether Mr. Hoover would, to use the technical term, "play ball" with them. They usually found Mr. Coolidge satisfactory in this respect.

Many of the political tribe await the advent of Mr. Hoover with some uneasiness. Many of the boys in the cloakrooms of congress who have large families to support and who are trying to get along regard Mr. Hoover somewhat as "a noble experiment" and they are waiting to see how everything works out.

TRUCK KILLS BOY

COLUMBUS, O., March 2.—Ernest Domyanovich, 4, was killed here yesterday when he was run down by a truck. The accident was held unavoidable.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE EYES OF THE WORLD—For I will set mine eyes upon them for good, (7) And I will give them a heart to know me, that I am the Lord; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their whole heart. —Jeremiah 24:6, 7.

MOTIVE OF AMBASSADOR'S HINT

Sir Esme Howard's hint of a new naval parley may not have been so premature nor so lacking in official inspiration as later reports from London would lead the uniformed to believe. A general election is to be held in the United Kingdom this summer. The campaign may postpone an actual invitation; but that the election itself is responsible for the hint can hardly be doubted. The Laborites who threaten to give the Conservatives a real battle at the polls, are attacking the government's foreign policy with unusual persistence; and it was predicted by their leaders that to undermine this attack the government would make advances to the United States on the matter of naval armaments.

The principal criticisms that the Labor party makes of Sir Austen Chamberlain's conduct of foreign affairs are that he has swallowed his personal fondness for the French to delay a rapprochement between Great Britain and Germany; and that he has allowed friction to arise between Great Britain and the United States. The Laborites point to the unhappy Anglo-French naval pact as a particularly glaring example of Sir Austen's inability to see on which side his country's bread is buttered. They are making an improvement in Great Britain's relations with the United States a prominent issue in the campaign.

With the domestic politics of the United Kingdom, we are in no way concerned, as a nation; but we are interested in the maintenance of cordial relations with Great Britain. Whatever its inspiration, an invitation from London to join in a new discussion of naval armaments, which contained promise of a happier eventuation than that of the Geneva parley, would be gladly received. Any straw that holds out hope of silencing the jingoes and quieting the nerves of our pacifists is worth grasping.

"There are no more tramps," says an economist, "but we have the itinerant hobo who works." Not, however, to the point where he puts himself in the hospital suffering from overexertion.

The Prince of Wales has given up hunting and sold his stable. The responsibilities of the throne cast their shadows before them.

A man wise in political affairs says every party should have a "key man." Is he the one who unlocks the strong box?

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK.—He owns one of the mid-western department stores and comes to Broadway now and then to Get Away From It All Down Home. The other yawning he spent over a thousand dollars for wine in one cafe, tipped every one liberally and proceeded out. He paused to watch the waiters and others who were playing craps in the corridor. He was urged to try his luck. He lost with every toss, however, and legitimately, too (the game was kosher), until he had dropped $1,400. Then he stopped, wrote out a check, tossed it to the floor and remarked: "Fellers, one more shake for $2,800 or nothing, eh?"

They agreed, but one of them immediately "brought out the tops" (the phoney cubes) which win for cheaters.

"That is," he added innocently enough, "if I can throw the dice," and so saying, he picked them up. The boys knew they were licked at their own racket, and their hearts sank, for their "sucker" picked them up and rolled them out, producing a seven!

HOW THEY GET THAT WAY

It appears that Norma Shearer is one of several beautiful actresses who frequently reveal "eye defects" (ritz for googly-eyed) on the screen. When Miss Shearer was first engaged at $125 weekly, her initial picture was shown before one of the West Coast flicker executives, who scolded the New York office with this telegram: "What's the idea of paying $125 a week to cross-eyed actresses?"

Not long after, the same executive (Irving Thalberg(married her.

THE MORNING MAIL

"Dear Mr. Winchell: You say that F. P. A. was told that George Ade used the expression 'Main Stem.' He did use it, but not in the same sense you do. You can find it in 'The Fable of the Kid Who Shifted His Ideal,' on page 24 of 'Fables in Slang.' It tells of a boy who, when asked why he was crying before a picture of James J. Jeffries, said: 'I was just thinking what chance have I got to grow up and be the Main Stem like Mr. Jeffries.' I am fairly familiar with Mr. Ade's writings, and think this is the only way he uses that expression. —Katherine Criswell, Tiffin, O."

F. P. A.'s Conning Tower in the World please copy.

HEHEHEH!

Then, there's Izzy Elinson's fable about the famous movie hero who, when taking the Old Gold test, gallantly waved the blindfold aside.

NO WONDER

Aunt Jemima, one of the players in Mr. Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" hit, tips the Toledos at 300 or over. She was ankling along the Main Stem with one of Singer's Midgets, who was yelling "Whoopee!"

"Why so gay?" queried Phil Baker, the "Pleasure Bound" star.

"Why not?" retorted the gnome, as he pointed to Jemima, "There's enough woman there for seven midgets, but she's mine — all mine!"

DR. ROCKWELL PRESCRIBES

Blood is thicker than water—so is gravy . . . A doctor's prescription comes in Latin, but the bill comes in English . . . One of the nurses went to see a a popular Broadway show and said the language in the play reminded her of the operating room full of patients just coming out of ether . . . If people would give their friends more fruit while they were well there'd be less need of bringing it to them in the hospital later on.

ADD LITTLE IRONIES

Some of the chorus lassies of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Whoopee" show are employing that stunt of placing a small box in their dressing room and depositing a coin every time they cuss. If a girl forgets herself and says "Hell" she is reminded to place a dime in the box. "Damn" rates a quarter, and anything more profane brings a fine of 50 cents.

Pretty Jean Ackerman forgot herself the other performance and it cost her $2.50.

At the end of the week the coin receptacle is turned over to a wardrobe mistress named Mary Keegan, who ironically enough empties it into her church's poor box.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

DIRECT ACTION

Dispatches say Polish women in the outskirts of Warsaw, capital city, wrecked five stores. Proprietors were accused of overcharging. In these civilized days of "conferences" and polite, ineffective organization efforts, one is attracted by this direct action. These women got results. One can't entirely defend them. It is always better to get results within the law, and to do without them if you can't get them that way. But there will always be an answering note of sympathy from most of us who would now and then, in a good cause, like to break a window to get what we want.

WITCHCRAFT TODAY

You learn from the newspapers that a New York woman, suing her husband for divorce, accuses him of having the "evil eye" and resorting to witchcraft. Not long ago there were accusations of witchcraft in Pennsylvania. Reading these items one wonders if life is so much different, after all, than it was in Salem, Massachusettes, in the seventeenth century. Many things have been added to life. Unfortunately some things have not been taken from it. The writer of this column, in the Great Smoky mountains of Tennessee, discovered the practice of "charming" away disease. Domesticating the human animal is only half the battle of civilization. Giving him a mind to think with and teaching him to use it is something else.

DENBY

The life of Edwin Denby, who died recently, may serve as an example of what a man may do by starting at the bottom, when he is really heading for the top. Denby was a "gob" in the navy; he was a "devil dog" in the marines. And he rose to be secretary of the navy. He was blamed when in the cabinet, for agreeing to the leasing of oil lands. Not a man who knew Edwin Denby but knew that he did only what he thought was for the true interests of his country. He was a real patriot.

NEW COMMANDMENTS

Dr. W. L. Stiger, pastor of a Boston Methodist church, compiles the new ten commandments for wives and women. They are interesting, whether observable or not:

1. Thou shalt not nag.
2. Thou shalt not be jealous.
3. Thou shalt not give thy thoughts wholly unto dressing.
4. Thou shalt not be pugnacious.
5. Thou shalt attempt to live up to the ideals that have been dreamed for thee.
6. Thou shalt not expect thy husband to be the cook or the dishwasher.
7. Thou shalt remember that thy home is thy first shrine.
8. Thou shalt remember that men love good women and cleave to them forever.
9. Thou shalt set the spiritual note of human life.
10. Thou shalt be loving and thou shalt have love.

DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT SAID TO REST ON CO-OPERATION

By DR. J. M. DORAN

Commissioner of Prohibition

(James M. Doran was born at Grand Forks, N. D., August 17, 1885. He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, later studying at George Washington university. Since 1907 he has been chemist in the internal revenue bureau of the United States treasury, having been head of the chemical and technical division since 1920. He was named commissioner of prohibition in 1927.)

More efficient enforcement of prohibition can be obtained through intelligent co-operation of all forces charged with enforcement responsibility rather than greater concentration of power in the federal government.

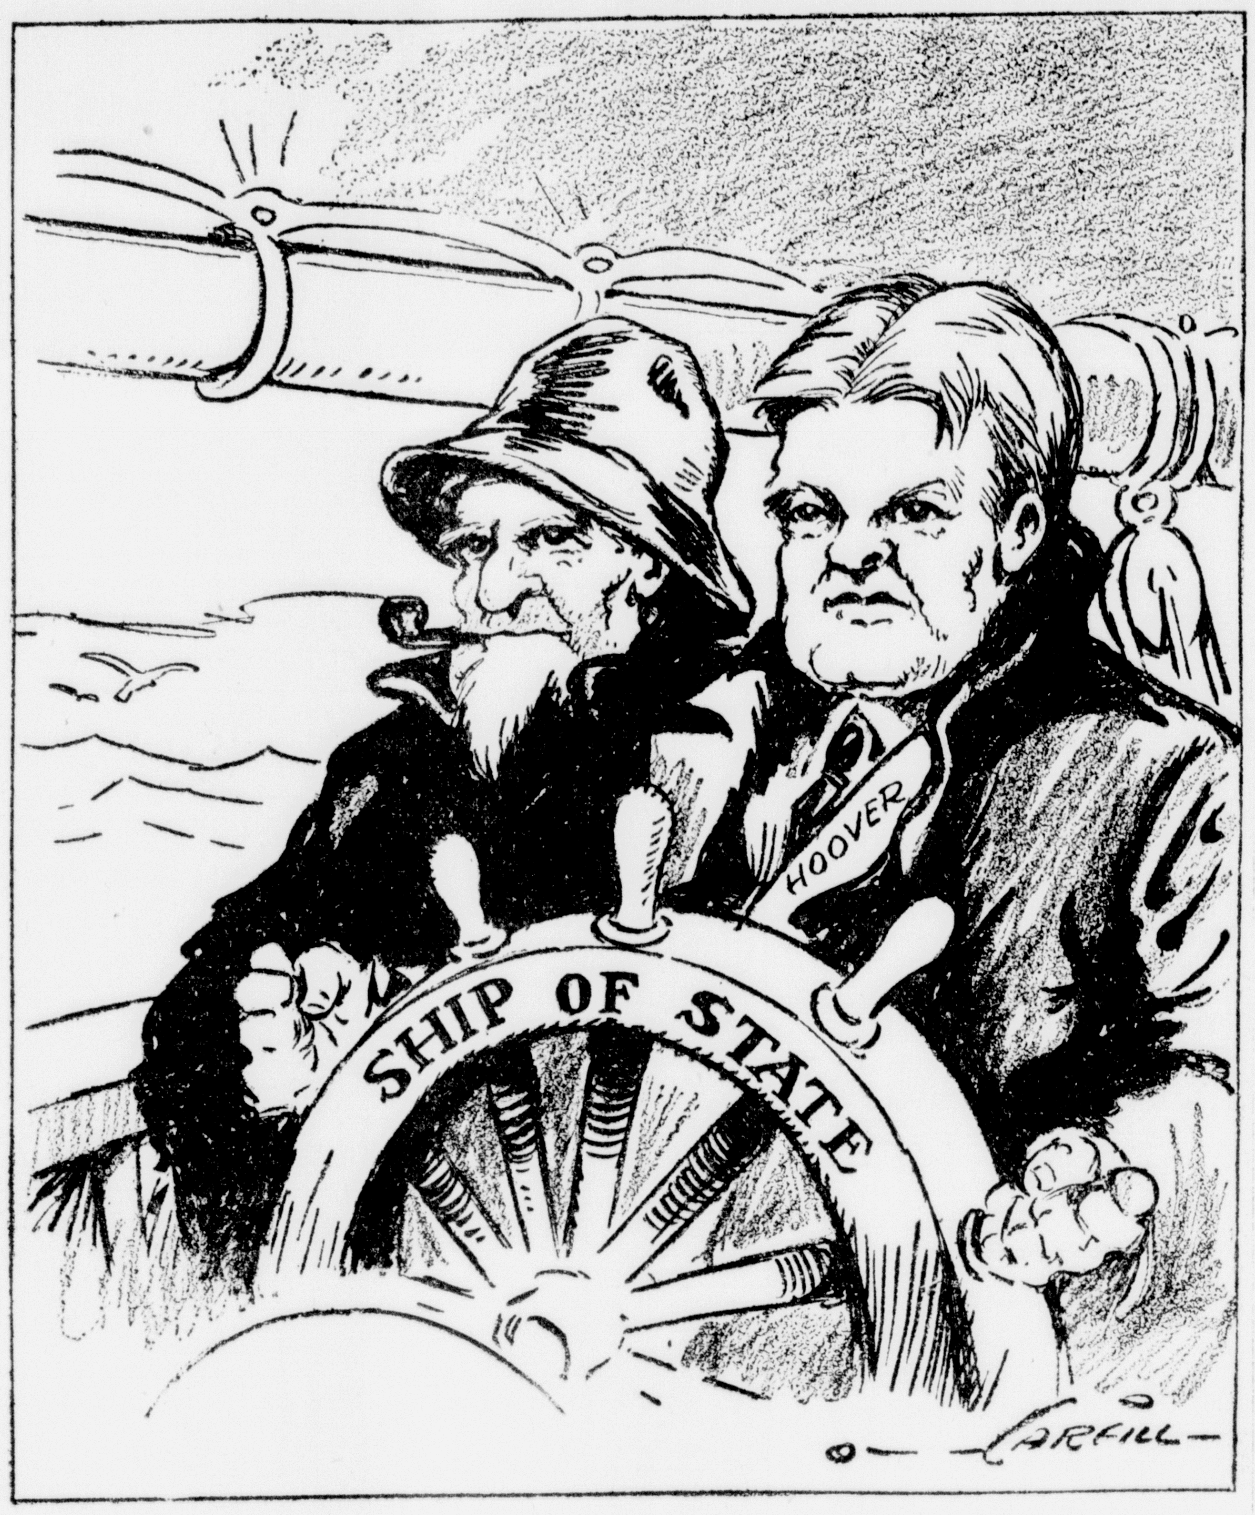
Complete responsibility in specific functions, a spirit of co-operation and a co-ordination of the various functions, together with hard daily work on the part of all officers and executives, will accomplish much. In my judgment, there is no quack remedy which deals with superficial symptoms that will change the situation over night. People who are spending their time and energy on such a quest would do well to inform themselves first on the problem, as information is the first requisite to intelligent action, and no man's opinion on a specific subject is worth any more than the amount of information he may possess on the same subject.

The question of details of enforcement by lawfully constituted authority, federal, state and municipal, is paramount, and its wise determination and solution is essential to the feature of our government. Believing as I do that the Eighteenth amendment and the national prohibition act is not only good law, but offers the best method for the suppression of alcoholism, which is a curse to the modern industrial state, and earnestly wishing to bring about further improvement in enforcement conditions, I urge a calm, deliberate and painstaking consideration of this problem by our thoughtful people.

Why is prohibition not better enforced? Why is it that liquor can be obtained in every city and town throughout the land? Why doesn't the government do something about it? How is it that speakeasies remain open and do business after many complaints have been made against them? Why does the government poison alcohol to enforce prohibition? These and questions of like character come to my desk continually and they have been broadcast throughout the land.

I am confident that if they know more of the working details of their government, federal and local, that public opinion expressed through political action will keep our affairs straight.

THE NEW WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN



How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Here we would introduce the "leader woman" with all her bright flags flying! She is the ardent feminist type—a Joan of Arc among moderns. Intellect she has, and brains, energy and courage. As an executive head in business, a club leader, or the foremost in her is profession, hers is the burden of responsibility, the joy of distinguished achievement.

She has the greatest of possibilities in working for health and good looks, because these gifts are some which may be cultivated to back up brains character and ambition. Yet the leader type must be careful that her very accomplishments are not her undoing.

Does she truly value beauty and charm? Does she know how much each woman needs them in her business grips with the modern world? Feminine cleverness and ambition — and intuition—that stronghold of woman's business and other successes, must combine with feminine personal charm of a very definite kind to gain the rewards they are seeking. The woman who belittles this fact will sooner or later defeat her own purpose.

Above all, she should never attempt to be masculine in her clothes or outward appearance. Courage, a keen so-called masculine mind, a carelessness toward unimportant details, are excellent characteristics. The successful leader should have them. But she must not let them express themselves unpleasantly in her wardrobe and personal appearance.

Her physical health should be the leader woman's first care and concern. For she must never sacrifice health to any of her ambitions. She should exercise and rest at regular pleasant intervals. And watch her figure carefully, to keep it trim and attractive. She must eat sensibly at regular hours each day, forgetting about her nerves (or rather making sure that she is their master).

Indeed, self-control is the quality she most needs to cultivate. Once she has self-control harnessed to her courage and brains, she need never fear failure in anything.

With her body heathy, her figure trim and her skin properly cared for, the leader woman may confidently indulge in smartly striking costume effects. But she must remember to keep to the conservative in the cut and fashion of her clothes. Correctly-tailored cloth or tweed suits, modist dresses of the tailleur type, chic hats, very trim and close, a fur scarf and the smartest of smart street shoes are the sort of clothes she chooses for city wear.

For formal or informal evening wear the leader woman may follow fashion to the very heights of its dictates, providing that she errs, if she does err, on the conservative rather than on the daring side. Smartly simple, sophisticated clothes, up-to-the-latest mode in their fashion, are exactly her type of clothes.

And she may wear vivid colors if she wears them with restraint and chooses them wisely A clever medium between brilliance and restraint — that is the keynote of this woman's type.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—It is natural to think of an independent politician as a radical, not a conservative. Yet a very ultra-conservative can lean back so far as to overdo it, even in the opinion of ordinary conservatives.

This, for instance, is a conservative country.

To be conservative is to be "regular."

A conservatvie, however, who is too conservative for the majority is just as truly irregular as the radicals are. That is, there are independents both ways.

To illustrate, it astonishes nobody to hear Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, referred to as an "independent." "Yes, sure," all hands will agree, "he's a radical."

But mention Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, as an "independent" and back will come the reaction, "Oh, no, he's very conservative."

He is, indeed. Moses is too conservative for most of the conservatives.

Norris is radically independent and Moses is conservatively independent. The one is about as independent as the other.

There is this difference—

The regulars, being conservative by nature, are more afraid of an independent radical than of an independent conservative.

They feel that the radicals are pushing ahead dangerously.

If an ultra-conservative lingers too far in the rear it is a nuisance sometimes, but it involves no real peril. Thus, at any rate, argue the regulars.

They heartily and sincerely wish George Norris in a hotter climate.

George Norris merely makes them slightly fretful occasionally.

Moses is consistent, anyhow. So is Norris. The Nebraskan always is in the lead, striving progressively. The New Englander always is behind, jamming on the brakes.

But Senator Theodore E. Burton, of Ohio, is a political anomaly.

A radical usually is more or less of a pacifist. A conservative generally is something of a militarist. That is to say, those are the epithets which they hurl at one another.

Now, Senator Burton distinctly is a conservative.

He also is a dyed-in-the-wool pacifist.

Senator Burton's pacifism is so far more of an embarrassment to the army and navy folk than any out-and-out radical's possibly could be.

When the regulars rally in support of some "armament program" of the administration's, and Senator Norris or Senator Shipstead or Senator LaFollette gets up and denounces it, everybody remarks, "Oh, well, he's a radical," and that's considered a pretty conclusive answer.

Senator Burton, however, is one of the "old guard." In every respect except that complex of his concerning armaments and antiwar treaties, he's as reliable a regular as comes to Washington.

The Ohio senator is not to be laughed off or pooh, poohed or treated lightly.

The regulars cannot afford to regard him as an outlaw, like Norris, because he is not. Off the subject of pacifism, he is a very valuable regular. Yet on that subject, he can make them twice as mad as Moses can, in his most independent moments.

Oh, there are independents and independents.

One Way to Get Control of the Appetite

B. has gained 20 pounds in the last four months that she has been married. She acknowledges that she has an awful appetite, eats between meals and at any old time. She is only 20 years old and she hates to be old before her time. She cannot seem to control her appetite. And how she loves candies and sweets!

Make a solemn resolve that you will control your appetite for at least one day, B. You can surely do that. Don't go to the dining table on that day. Allow yourself 500 to 600 calories of fruit or skim or buttermilk, or thin soups, or a combination of these. If you can do this for three days, so much the better, but you will find that one day alone will be an enormous help. You must learn to Petersize (count your calories) for it will make you realize more than anything else how much you eat and why you must limit your candy and desserts.

The pamphlet giving instructions on reducing and gaining can be obtained by following column rules. I am sure it will give you more inspiration to continue.

Mrs. A.—The symptoms of the change of life (menopause or climacteric) are apparently due to the gradual lessening of the internal secretion of the ovaries. However, this is a perfectly normal process and should not be accompanied by any great distress. There may be some hot flashes, and perhaps a greater nervousness than usual, but they should not cause any worry.

No function ceases after the menopause except the functions of reproduction.

After the artificial meno menopause—that is, one brought on prematurely by conditions which make it necessary to remove the ovaries, or treat them with radium or Xray—the symptoms may be a little more marked. If they are too disturbing, tell your physician, for there are medications that can be taken which will help.

A woman going through the menopause, artificial or natural, should increase her mental activities so that she doesn't brood over herself, and she should realize that it is normal for every woman to go through this period if she lives long enough.

Many have the idea that an artificial menopause causes a woman to become masculine and age rapidly, but this is not true. Nor is it true that a woman must necessarily put on weight at the menopause, natural or artificial. She frequently does, but it is not necessary, no more than at any other time.

We have an article on the Menopause and one on the Hygiene of Women which you may have.

H.—Don't feel that you are disgraced because a family of undesirable tenants have taken up their abode in your hair. This may accidentally happen in the best of families. I can vouch for this, for I had all varieties while doing postwar work in the Balkans.

There are several effective treatments for these pests; among them, soaking the hair overnight with half-kerosene and half sweet oil or an infusion of the tincture of larkspur seeds. Still another good method is a daily shampoo, until the pests are gone with a naphtha soap, leaving the lather on for five minutes. The nits must be removed, afterwards, after any treatment both for the looks and the possibility that some haven't escaped death. To remove them, saturate the hair with vinegar or lemon juice to soften the gluelike substance which causes them to adhere, and then comb with a fine comb or pull the strands of hair through a cloth.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

How many different lines of work are open to women today. It seems as if everyone should be suited and no one need be that "Square peg in a round hole" that we've heard so much about. The positions girls and women take, however, are still those that are open to them when necessity calls, and not the ones they would choose. Vocational work with school children has done much and will do more toward steering them toward their proper environment, but there are still many misfits.

Work that one likes is one of the answers to that restless spirit that makes a young person take one job and discard it and take another — makes rolling stones of them. With girls it is often the urge to marry and have a home and children instead of a daily job in the business world that makes them ill at ease. And when there seems little chance of this, when, for one reason or another, a girl does not attract men or does not have a chance to meet the men she would attract, often and often she eats her heart out in loneliness, feeling that life itself has conspired to rob her of everything that makes it worth while.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: You have solved so many problems for others, probably you can help me. I read your column every night, but have never seen a proposition like mine. I am a girl of 20, neat, respectable, etc., but I never have dates. I'm always sitting at home while other girls much younger than myself are having a good time. Not that I'm anxious to get married, yet I guess it's natural to be interested in boys. I know plenty of them, who are nice when they see me, but they never date me. How come? I'm sure I wouldn't bore anyone in whose company I'd be, because I'm jolly, full of fun and love good times. When I read of some girls whose boy friends don't spend enough on them or who don't remain true, I wonder why they should be so dissatisfied. I would be glad if only HAD boy friends.

PASSED UP."

I will have to turn prophet and foretell that your time will come. It sometimes happens that a girl will not attract boys when she is very young, but will grow increasingly attractive as she develops. It may be so in your case. Now, isn't there some kind of work you could be doing for others—girls poorer than yourself, or children—something that will take your mind off yourself and interest you until Prince Charming comes along?

L. AND A.: You can't "get a boy back" that you never had. If he seems to dislike you and broke a date with one of you, I advise you to leave him alone and make other friends.

BROKEN: It would be a good idea to invite your former boy friend to the party. If he declines the invitation you will know definitely that he is no longer interested, and it may be that this is your chance to "make up" for keeps.

"A" and "PUZZLED": Be friendly and pleasant to both boys, dear, and try not to bother about being "in love' until you are older.

PARROT PROVES THAT PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT

"Well, there is one thing sure" thought the boy, "Mr. Parrott here may have been Polly's sweetheart but right now the fellow seems to think more of his looks than of his lost love. What conceited birds these parrots are!" Peter did not say this out loud, though. He only asked:

"But how did you happen to know my name? That is what puzzles me."

"Polly told me of course. Besides almost every day from my perch in the woods I heard your mother calling, 'Peter, Peter, come here!' Her voice was sweeter far than any parrot's in the sycamore tree, and so cheery sounding it just made you feel glad all over to hear it. I made up my mind to make mine sound like it if I could."

All this while Miss Parrot had not said a word, but at this last remark she turned to Mr. Parrot and spoke:

"Now that you have answered all the boy's questions, you are coming to the one that I asked you a long time ago. Just how did you manage to talk like a Two-Legs? Why, it is wonderful! I never would have thought you were such a smart bird to look at you!"

Mr. Parrot bowed low and chuckled gleefully.

"Thanks, tee hee! Haw, haw! Now don't you flatter me any more or I shall do something foolish. It always makes me feel silly to have nice things said to me—I am not used to it, you see. I guess I am the only parrot in the woods who can talk like a Two-Legs, and it may be giving away my secret to tell you how I do it, but you have been so kind I guess I will."

"Oh, please do," begged the boy. 'I always wanted to know how Polly managed to mimic us so well."

"To begin with," declared Mr. Parrot, 'you must know that once I make up my mind to do a thing I let nothing stand in my way.

"Wanting to have a voice like your mother's, boy, I tried and tried and tried to make a noise like a Human's.

"Day after day, all by myself, out in the woods where nobody could hear me, I practiced calling 'Peter, come here.' But try as I would, my voice was as hoarse and croaking as ever it was. Then suddenly one morning I heard myself saying 'Peter' and it sounded just like I wanted it to.

"You yourself, boy, would have thought it was your mother calling you. I was so surprised that I almost fell off the branch. Then suddenly I had an idea. I would have some fun. What do you suppose I did?"

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE EYES OF THE WORLD—For I will set mine eyes upon them for good, (7) And I will give them a heart to know me, that I am the Lord; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their whole heart. —Jeremiah 24:6, 7.

MOTIVE OF AMBASSADOR'S HINT

Sir Esme Howard's hint of a new naval parley may not have been so premature nor so lacking in official inspiration as later reports from London would lead the uniformed to believe. A general election is to be held in the United Kingdom this summer. The campaign may postpone an actual invitation; but that the election itself is responsible for the hint can hardly be doubted. The Laborites who threaten to give the Conservatives a real battle at the polls, are attacking the government's foreign policy with unusual persistence; and it was predicted by their leaders that to undermine this attack the government would make advances to the United States on the matter of naval armaments.

The principal criticisms that the Labor party makes of Sir Austen Chamberlain's conduct of foreign affairs are that he has swallowed his personal fondness for the French to delay a rapprochement between Great Britain and Germany; and that he has allowed friction to arise between Great Britain and the United States. The Laborites point to the unhappy Anglo-French naval pact as a particularly glaring example of Sir Austen's inability to see on which side his country's bread is buttered. They are making an improvement in Great Britain's relations with the United States a prominent issue in the campaign.

With the domestic politics of the United Kingdom, we are in no way concerned, as a nation; but we are interested in the maintenance of cordial relations with Great Britain. Whatever its inspiration, an invitation from London to join in a new discussion of naval armaments, which contained promise of a happier eventuation than that of the Geneva parley, would be gladly received. Any straw that holds out hope of silencing the jingoes and quieting the nerves of our pacifists is worth grasping.

"There are no more tramps," says an economist, "but we have the itinerant hobo who works." Not, however, to the point where he puts himself in the hospital suffering from overexertion.

The Prince of Wales has given up hunting and sold his stable. The responsibilities of the throne cast their shadows before them.

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK.—He owns one of the mid-western department stores and comes to Broadway now and then to Get Away From It All Down Home. The other evening he spent over a thousand dollars for wine in one cafe, tipped every one liberally and proceeded out. He paused to watch the waiters and others who were playing craps in the corridor. He was urged to try his luck. He lost with every toss, however, and legitimately, too (the game was kosher), until he had dropped $1,400. Then he stopped, wrote out a check, tossed it to the floor and remarked: "Fellers, one more shake for $2,800 or nothing, eh?"

They agreed, but one of them immediately "brought out the tops" (the phoney cubes) which win for cheaters.

"That is," he added innocently enough, "if I can throw the dice," and so saying, he picked them up. The boys knew they were licked at their own racket, and their hearts sank, for their "sucker" picked them up and rolled them out, producing a seven!

HOW THEY GET THAT WAY

It appears that Norma Shearer is one of several beautiful actresses who frequently reveal "eye defects" (ritz for googly-eyed) on the screen. When Miss Shearer was first engaged at $125 weekly, her initial picture was shown before one of the West Coast flicker executives, who scolded the New York office with this telegram: "What's the idea of paying $125 a week to cross-eyed actresses?"

Not long after, the same executive (Irving Thalberg(married her.

THE MORNING MAIL

"Dear Mr. Winchell: You say that F. P. A. was told that George Ade used the expression 'Main Stem.' He did use it, but not in the same sense you do. You can find it in 'The Fable of the Kid Who Shifted His Ideal,' on page 24 of 'Fables in Slang.' It tells of a boy who, when asked why he was crying before a picture of James J. Jeffries, said: 'I was just thinking what chance have I got to grow up and be the Main Stem like Mr. Jeffries.' I am fairly familiar with Mr. Ade's writings, and think this is the only way he uses that expression. —Katherine Criswell, Tiffin, O."

F. P. A.'s Conning Tower in the World please copy.

HEHEHEH!

Then, there's Izzy Elinson's fable about the famous movie hero who, when taking the Old Gold test, gallantly waved the blindfold aside.

NO WONDER

Aunt Jemima, one of the players in Mr. Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" hit, tips the Toledos at 300 or over. She was ankling along the Main Stem with one of Singer's Midgets, who was yelling "Whoopee!"

"Why so gay?" queried Phil Baker, the "Pleasure Bound" star.

"Why not?" retorted the gnome, as he pointed to Jemima, "There's enough woman there for seven midgets, but she's mine — all mine!"

DR. ROCKWELL PRESCRIBES

Blood is thicker than water—so is gravy . . . A doctor's prescription comes in Latin, but the bill comes in English . . . One of the nurses went to see a a popular Broadway show and said the language in the play reminded her of the operating room full of patients just coming out of ether . . . If people would give their friends more fruit while they were well there'd be less need of bringing it to them in the hospital later on.

ADD LITTLE IRONIES

Some of the chorus lassies of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Whoopee" show are employing that stunt of placing a small box in their dressing room and depositing a coin every time they cuss. If a girl forgets herself and says "Hell" she is reminded to place a dime in the box. "Damn" rates a quarter, and anything more profane brings a fine of 50 cents.

Pretty Jean Ackerman forgot herself the other performance and it cost her $2.50.

At the end of the week the coin receptacle is turned over to a wardrobe mistress named Mary Keegan, who ironically enough empties it into her church's poor box.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

DIRECT ACTION

Dispatches say Polish women in the outskirts of Warsaw, capital city, wrecked five stores. Proprietors were accused of overcharging. In these civilized days of "conferences" and polite, ineffective organization efforts, one is attracted by this direct action. These women got results. One can't entirely defend them. It is always better to get results within the law, and to do without them if you can't get them that way. But there will always be an answering note of sympathy from most of us who would now and then, in a good cause, like to break a window to get what we want.

WITCHCRAFT TODAY

You learn from the newspapers that a New York woman, suing her husband for divorce, accuses him of having the "evil eye" and resorting to witchcraft. Not long ago there were accusations of witchcraft in Pennsylvania. Reading these items one wonders if life is so much different, after all, than it was in Salem, Massachusettes, in the seventeenth century. Many things have been added to life. Unfortunately some things have not been taken from it. The writer of this column, in the Great Smoky mountains of Tennessee, discovered the practice of "charming" away disease. Domesticating the human animal is only half the battle of civilization. Giving him a mind to think with and teaching him to use it is something else.

DENBY

The life of Edwin Denby, who died recently, may serve as an example of what a man may do by starting at the bottom, when he is really heading for the top. Denby was a "gob" in the navy; he was a "devil dog" in the marines. And he rose to be secretary of the navy. He was blamed when in the cabinet, for agreeing to the leasing of oil lands. Not a man who knew Edwin Denby but knew that he did only what he thought was for the true interests of his country. He was a real patriot.

NEW COMMANDMENTS

Dr. W. L. Stiger, pastor of a Boston Methodist church, compiles the new ten commandments for wives and women. They are interesting, whether observable or not:

1. Thou shalt not nag.
2. Thou shalt not be jealous.
3. Thou shalt not give thy thoughts wholly unto dressing.
4. Thou shalt not be pugnacious.
5. Thou shalt attempt to live up to the ideals that have been dreamed for thee.
6. Thou shalt not expect thy husband to be the cook or the dishwasher.
7. Thou shalt remember that thy home is thy first shrine.
8. Thou shalt remember that men love good women and cleave to them forever.
9. Thou shalt set the spiritual note of human life.
10. Thou shalt be loving and thou shalt have love.

DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT SAID TO REST ON CO-OPERATION

By DR. J. M. DORAN
Commissioner of Prohibition

(James M. Doran was born at Grand Forks, N. D., August 17, 1885. He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, later studying at George Washington university. Since 1907 he has been chemist in the internal revenue bureau of the United States treasury, having been head of the chemical and technical division since 1920. He was named commissioner of prohibition in 1927.)

More efficient enforcement of prohibition can be obtained through intelligent co-operation of all forces charged with enforcement responsibility rather than greater concentration of power in the federal government.

Complete responsibility in specific functions, a spirit of co-operation and a co-ordination of the various functions, together with hard daily work on the part of all officers and executives, will accomplish much. In my judgment, there is no quack remedy which deals with superficial symptoms that will change the situation over night. People who are spending their time and energy on such a quest would do well to inform themselves first on the problem, as information is the first requisite to intelligent action, and no man's opinion on a specific subject is worth any more than the amount of information he may possess on the same subject.

The question of details of enforcement by lawfully constituted authority, federal, state and municipal, is paramount, and its wise determination and solution is essential to the feature of our government. Believing as I do that the Eighteenth amendment and the national prohibition act is not only good law, but offers the best method for the suppression of alcoholism, which is a curse to the modern industrial state, and earnestly wishing to bring about further improvement in enforcement conditions, I urge a calm, deliberate and painstaking consideration of this problem by our thoughtful people.

Why is prohibition not better enforced? Why is it that liquor can be obtained in every city and town throughout the land? Why doesn't the government do something about it? How is it that speakeasies remain open and do business after many complaints have been made against them? Why does the government poison alcohol to enforce prohibition? These and questions of like character come to my desk continually and they have been broadcast throughout the land.

I am confident that if they know more of the working details of their government, federal and local, that public opinion expressed through political action will keep our affairs straight.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Here we would introduce the "leader woman" with all her bright flags flying! She is the ardent feminist type—a Joan of Arc among moderns. Intellect she has, and brains, energy and courage. As an executive head in business, a club leader, or the foremost in her is profession, hers is the burden of responsibility, the joy of distinguished achievement.

She has the greatest of possibilities in working for health and good looks, because these gifts are some which may be cultivated to back up brains character and ambition. Yet the leader type must be careful that her very accomplishments are not her undoing.

Does she truly value beauty and charm? Does she know how much each woman needs them in her business grips with the modern world? Feminine cleverness and ambition — and intuition—that stronghold of woman's business and other successes, must combine with feminine personal charm of a very definite kind to gain the rewards they are seeking. The woman who belittles this fact will sooner or later defeat her own purpose.

Above all, she should never attempt to be masculine in her clothes or outward appearance. Courage, a keen so-called masculine mind, a carelessness toward unimportant details, are excellent characteristics. The successful leader should have them. But she must not let them express themselves unpleasantly in her wardrobe and personal appearance.

Her physical health should be the leader woman's first care and concern. For she must never sacrifice health to any of her ambitions. She should exercise and rest at regular pleasant intervals. And watch her figure carefully, to keep it trim and attractive. She must eat sensibly at regular hours each day, forgetting about her nerves (or rather making sure that she is their master).

Indeed, self-control is the quality she most needs to cultivate. Once she has self-control harnessed to her courage and brains, she need never fear failure in anything.

With her body heathy, her figure trim and her skin properly cared for, the leader woman may confidently indulge in smartly striking costume effects. But she must remember to keep to the conservative in the cut and fashion of her clothes. Correctly-tailored cloth or tweed suits, modist dresses of the tailleur type, chic hats, very trim and close, a fur scarf and the smartest of smart street shoes are the sort of clothes she chooses for city wear.

For formal or informal evening wear the leader woman may follow fashion to the very heights of its dictates, providing that she errs, if she does err, on the conservative rather than on the daring side. Smartly simple, sophisticated clothes, up-to-the-latest mode in their fashion, are exactly her type of clothes.

And she may wear vivid colors if she wears them with restraint and chooses them wisely. A clever medium between brilliance and restraint — that is the keynote of this woman's type.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—It is natural to think of an independent politician as a radical, not a conservative. Yet a very ultra-conservative can lean back so far as to overdo it, even in the opinion of ordinary conservatives.

This, for instance, is a conservative country.

To be conservative is to be "regular."

A conservatvie, however, who is too conservative for the majority is just as truly irregular as the radicals are. That is, there are independents both ways.

To illustrate, it astonishes nobody to hear Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, referred to as an "independent." "Yes, sure," all hands will agree, "he's a radical."

But mention Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, as an "independent" and back will come the reaction, "Oh, no, he's very conservative."

He is, indeed. Moses is too conservative for most of the conservatives.

Norris is radically independent and Moses is conservatively independent. The one is about as independent as the other.

There is this difference—

The regulars, being conservative by nature, are more afraid of an independent radical than of an independent conservative.

They feel that the radicals are pushing ahead dangerously.

If an ultra-conservative lingers too far in the rear it is a nuisance sometimes, but it involves no real peril. Thus, at any rate, argue the regulars.

They heartily and sincerely wish George Norris in a hotter climate.

George Norris merely makes them slightly fretful occasionally.

Moses is consistent, anyhow. So is Norris. The Nebraskan always is in the lead, striving progressively. The New Englander always is behind, jamming on the brakes.

But Senator Theodore E. Burton, of Ohio, is a political anomaly.

A radical usually is more or less of a pacifist. A conservative generally is something of a militarist. That is to say, those are the epithets which they hurl at one another.

Now, Senator Burton distinctly is a conservative.

He also is a dyed-in-the-wool pacifist.

Senator Burton's pacifism is so far more of an embarrassment to the army and navy folk than any out-and-out radical's possibly could be.

When the regulars rally in support of some "armament program" of the administration's, and Senator Norris or Senator Shipstead or Senator LaFollette gets up and denounces it, everybody remarks, "Oh, well, he's a radical," and that's considered a pretty conclusive answer.

Senator Burton, however, is one of the "old guard." In every respect except that complex of his concerning armaments and antiwar treaties, he's as reliable a regular as comes to Washington.

The Ohio senator is not to be laughed off or pooh, poohed or treated lightly.

The regulars cannot afford to regard him as an outlaw, like Norris, because he is not. Off the subject of pacifism, he is a very valuable regular. Yet on that subject, he can make them twice as mad as Moses can, in his most independent moments.

Oh, there are independents and independents.

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

How many different lines of work are open to women today. It seems as if everyone should be suited and no one need be that "Square peg in a round hole" that we've heard so much about. The positions girls and women take, however, are still those that are open to them when necessity calls, and not the ones they would choose. Vocational work with school children has done much and will do more toward steering them toward their proper environment, but there are still many misfits.

Work that one likes is one of the answers to that restless spirit that makes a young person take one job and discard it and take another — makes rolling stones of them. With girls it is often the urge to marry and have a home and children instead of a daily job in the business world that makes them ill at ease. And when there seems little chance of this, when, for one reason or another, a girl does not attract men or does not have a chance to meet the men she would attract, often and often she eats her heart out in loneliness, feeling that life itself has conspired to rob her of everything that makes it worth while.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: You have solved so many problems for others, probably you can help me. I read your column every night, but have never seen a proposition like mine. I am a girl of 20, neat, respectable, etc., but I never have dates. I'm always sitting at home while other girls much younger than myself are having a good time. Not that I'm anxious to get married, yet I guess it's natural to be interested in boys. I know plenty of them, who are nice when they see me, but they never date me. How come? I'm sure I wouldn't bore anyone in whose company I'd be, because I'm jolly, full of fun and love good times. When I read of some girls whose boy friends don't spend enough on them or who don't remain true, I wonder why they should be so dissatisfied. I would be glad if only HAD boy friends.

PASSED UP."

I will have to turn prophet and foretell that your time will come. It sometimes happens that a girl will not attract boys when she is very young, but will grow increasingly attractive as she develops. It may be so in your case. Now, isn't there some kind of work you could be doing for others—girls poorer than yourself, or children—something that will take your mind off yourself and interest you until Prince Charming comes along?

L. AND A.: You can't "get a boy back" that you never had. If he seems to dislike you and broke a date with one of you, I advise you to leave him alone and make other friends.

BROKEN: It would be a good idea to invite your former boy friend to the party. If he declines the invitation you will know definitely that he is no longer interested, and it may be that this is your chance to "make up" for keeps.

"A" and "PUZZLED": Be friendly and pleasant to both boys, dear, and try not to bother about being "in love' until you are older.

Peter's Adventures

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

PARROT PROVES THAT PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT

"Well, there is one thing sure" thought the boy, "Mr. Parrott here may have been Polly's sweetheart but right now the fellow seems to think more of his looks than of his lost love. What conceited birds these parrots are!" Peter did not say this out loud, though. He only asked:

"But how did you happen to know my name? That is what puzzles me."

"Polly told me of course. Besides almost every day from my perch in the woods I heard your mother calling, 'Peter, Peter, come here!' Her voice was sweeter far than any parrot's in the sycamore tree, and so cheery sounding it just made you feel glad all over to hear it. I made up my mind to make mine sound like it if I could."

All this while Miss Parrot had not said a word, but at this last remark she turned to Mr. Parrot and spoke:

"Now that you have answered all the boy's questions, you are coming to the one that I asked you a long time ago. Just how did you manage to talk like a Two-Legs? Why, it is wonderful! I never would have thought you were such a smart bird to look at you!"

Mr. Parrot bowed low and chuckled gleefully.

"Thanks, tee hee! Haw, haw! Now don't you flatter me any more or I shall do something foolish. It always makes me feel silly to have nice things said to me—I am not used to it, you see. I guess I am the only parrot in the woods who can talk like a Two-Legs, and it may be giving away my secret to tell you how I do it, but you have been so kind I guess I will."

"Oh, please do," begged the boy. 'I always wanted to know how Polly managed to mimic us so well."

"To begin with," declared Mr. Parrot, 'you must know that once I make up my mind to do a thing I let nothing stand in my way.

"Wanting to have a voice like your mother's, boy, I tried and tried and tried to make a noise like a Human's.

"Day after day, all by myself, out in the woods where nobody could hear me, I practiced calling 'Peter, come here.' But try as I would, my voice was as hoarse and croaking as ever it was. Then suddenly one morning I heard myself saying 'Peter' and it sounded just like I wanted it to.

"You yourself, boy, would have thought it was your mother calling you. I was so surprised that I almost fell off the branch. Then suddenly I had an idea. I would have some fun. What do you suppose I did?"

SCONES!

Tea Delicacies A-Plenty, But Who's To Eat 'Em?

Mrs. Herbert Hoover

By BONITA WITT
Staff Writer for Central Press and Gazette

WASHINGTON, March 2.—When the Hoovers move into the White House in March it's a pretty sure guess that those favored souls who are invited to partake of tea will be served with some of the finest scones to be found outside of Scotland. They are Mrs. Hoover's especial favorites and she usually finds time to superintend their baking herself.

But just who is going to be invited to eat those scones?

That's what Washington is wondering. Of course there is a certain amount of entertaining that the president and his wife must do, but beyond that how far will the Hoovers go? They already have announced they do not plan to attend the inaugural ball to be held in their honor.

Their charming white house on S street has been the scene of many delightful entertainment, but those invited usually were intimate friends rather than politically expedient guests. The future first lady prefers to gather a company of congenial folk in her living room and chat informally as her two young secretaries pass scones and tea cakes, to presiding over state functions, you gather as you observe her going from group to group, introducing strangers to her circle and talking with old friends.

Reporters and cameramen won't be swarming continually about the White House if Mrs. Hoover has her way. She does not like to be interviewed and prefers not to talk about herself. About her home, her garden, her Girl Scouts (she is a national Girl Scout officer) she is quite talkative, but not about herself. One cannot quite picture the rather stately woman who once was Lou Henry, who as a girl used to tear along California roads mounted on her horse, relishing posing with delegation after delegation of men and women from every state in the union, who have come to Washington on every conceivable mission.

There'll be scones aplenty at the White House teas, for as folks in the country used to say, "Lou Hoover sets a good table"—but who will sit at that table?

Washington wonders.

Poems that Live

THE GRAVE OF LOVE

I DUG, beneath the cypress shade,
What well might seem an elfin's grave;
And every pledge in earth I laid,
That erst thy false affection gave.

I pressed them down the sod beneath;
I placed one mossy stone above;
And twined the rose's fading wreath
Around the sepulchre of love.

Frail as thy love, the flowers were dead
Ere yet the evening sun was set:
But years shall see the cypress spread,
Immutable as my regret.

SCONES!

Tea Delicacies A-Plenty, But Who's To Eat 'Em?

Mrs. Herbert Hoover

By BONITA WITT
Staff Writer for Central Press and Gazette

WASHINGTON, March 2.—When the Hoovers move into the White House in March it's a pretty sure guess that those favored souls who are invited to partake of tea will be served with some of the finest scones to be found outside of Scotland. They are Mrs. Hoover's especial favorites and she usually finds time to superintend their baking herself.

But just who is going to be invited to eat those scones?

That's what Washington is wondering. Of course there is a certain amount of entertaining that the president and his wife must do, but beyond that how far will the Hoovers go? They already have announced they do not plan to attend the inaugural ball to be held in their honor.

Their charming white house on S street has been the scene of many delightful entertainment, but those invited usually were intimate friends rather than politically expedient guests. The future first lady prefers to gather a company of congenial folk in her living room and chat informally as her two young secretaries pass scones and tea cakes, to presiding over state functions, you gather as you observe her going from group to group, introducing strangers to her circle and talking with old friends.

Reporters and cameramen won't be swarming continually about the White House if Mrs. Hoover has her way. She does not like to be interviewed and prefers not to talk about herself. About her home, her garden, her Girl Scouts (she is a national Girl Scout officer) she is quite talkative, but not about herself. One cannot quite picture the rather stately woman who once was Lou Henry, who as a girl used to tear along California roads mounted on her horse, relishing posing with delegation after delegation of men and women from every state in the union, who have come to Washington on every conceivable mission.

There'll be scones aplenty at the White House teas, for as folks in the country used to say, "Lou Hoover sets a good table"—but who will sit at that table?

Washington wonders.

Poems that Live

THE GRAVE OF LOVE

I DUG, beneath the cypress shade,
What well might seem an elfin's grave;
And every pledge in earth I laid,
That erst thy false affection gave.

I pressed them down the sod beneath;
I placed one mossy stone above;
And twined the rose's fading wreath
Around the sepulchre of love.

Frail as thy love, the flowers were dead
Ere yet the evening sun was set:
But years shall see the cypress spread,
Immutable as my regret.

FLOODS TO COST GREENE COUNTY $12,000 IN REPAIRS ESTIMATED

Damage to Greene County roads as a result of the recent high water in parts of the county is estimated at $12,000 by County Surveyor W. J. Davis, following the completion of a survey Friday.

Swollen streams washed out great gaps in roadbeds and resulted in the temporary closing of parts of several highways to traffic, he announced.

The damage is exclusive of repairs which must be made to state roads in the county and is characterized as the worst since the 1913 flood. Total damage to state roads will not amount to as great a figure, it is believed.

The I. C. and E. traction bridge east of Osborn was washed out and has delayed traffic on the line for several days. Only the suspended track remains over the river.

The road bridge between Old Osborn and New Carlisle started to collapse when the north abutment gave way. Traffic on this road will be held up for some time owing to damage to this structure.

Large patches of the road leading from Old Osborn west to the Valley Road were washed away, closing this part of the pike to traffic for the present. Pending repairs, a portion of the Lower Bellbrook Pike near Bellbrook is also closed because of washouts.

At Yellow Springs the possibility of a water shortage because of the flooding of the pumping station was averted when an emergency gasoline engine was substituted for the electric motor.

"While the village's waterworks department worked on the removal of the electric motor, the supply was taken from the standpipe. By nightfall Tuesday the content had descended to one-sixth of its capacity and the danger of a shortage increased. Early the next morning, however, the current was switched to the gasoline engine and it was soon pumping an average of 180 gallons a minute.

The electric motor was sent to The Dayton Power and Light Co. to be dried out and will be returned soon. Little anxiety prevailed in the town and except for obscure notices warning against excessive use of water, there were no signs of danger.

Steps will be taken immediately by the town council to raise the foundation of the pumping station, according to John Alexander, marshal of the village.

The municipal waterworks station, which serves Xenia, located north of Old Town, was entirely surrounded by water overflowing from three streams, but was high and dry. To damage the machinery the water would have to raise to a level twelve feet higher than the high water mark of last Tuesday.

The waterworks building is waterproof up to a certain height. The only way it could be reached for a time was by means of a boat which Superintendent T. H. Zell keeps there for such emergencies and utilized early in the week when water isolated the plant.

SHAKESPEARE PLAY INSPIRES INTEREST OF THEATER GOERS

An event of unusual interest to the theatergoers of Xenia is the coming engagement of the Stratford Players in Shakespeare's great tragedy of "Julius Caesar." This organization is composed of Shakespearean actors of great experience who were formerly members of the company of the late Robert B. Mantell, for many years recognized as the foremost actor of the American stage.

Arrangements have been completed for them to present "Julius Caesar" at Jean B. Elwell Auditorium at Xenia Central High School Tuesday, March 5.

The play is a daring performance in one principal respect in that it takes for its slogan "the play's the thing," and is said to be performed without elaborate stage scenery, bizarre innovations, or other fantastic devices. The emphasis is laid principally in the force of the acting, the quality of the reading and the dignity and clarity with which the age-old lines are enunciated.

"Julius Caesar" was one of the most successful productions of Shakespearean plays made in New York in late years. When presented by the Players Club, the organization's receipts for one week approximated $25,000, proving conclusively the lasting popularity of this renowned tragedy.

FLOODS TO COST GREENE COUNTY $12,000 IN REPAIRS ESTIMATED

Damage to Greene County roads as a result of the recent high water in parts of the county is estimated at $12,000 by County Surveyor W. J. Davis, following the completion of a survey Friday.

Swollen streams washed out great gaps in roadbeds and resulted in the temporary closing of parts of several highways to traffic, he announced.

The damage is exclusive of repairs which must be made to state roads in the county and is characterized as the worst since the 1913 flood. Total damage to state roads will not amount to as great a figure, it is believed.

The I. C. and E. traction bridge east of Osborn was washed out and has delayed traffic on the line for several days. Only the suspended track remains over the river.

The road bridge between Old Osborn and New Carlisle started to collapse when the north abutment gave way. Traffic on this road will be held up for some time owing to damage to this structure.

Large patches of the road leading from Old Osborn west to the Valley Road were washed away, closing this part of the pike to traffic for the present. Pending repairs, a portion of the Lower Bellbrook Pike near Bellbrook is also closed because of washouts.

At Yellow Springs the possibility of a water shortage because of the flooding of the pumping station was averted when an emergency gasoline engine was substituted for the electric motor.

"While the village's waterworks department worked on the removal of the electric motor, the supply was taken from the standpipe. By nightfall Tuesday the content had descended to one-sixth of its capacity and the danger of a shortage increased. Early the next morning, however, the current was switched to the gasoline engine and it was soon pumping an average of 180 gallons a minute.

The electric motor was sent to The Dayton Power and Light Co. to be dried out and will be returned soon. Little anxiety prevailed in the town and except for obscure notices warning against excessive use of water, there were no signs of danger.

Steps will be taken immediately by the town council to raise the foundation of the pumping station, according to John Alexander, marshal of the village.

The municipal waterworks station, which serves Xenia, located north of Old Town, was entirely surrounded by water overflowing from three streams, but was high and dry. To damage the machinery the water would have to raise to a level twelve feet higher than the high water mark of last Tuesday.

The waterworks building is waterproof up to a certain height. The only way it could be reached for a time was by means of a boat which Superintendent T. H. Zell keeps there for such emergencies and utilized early in the week when water isolated the plant.

SHAKESPEARE PLAY INSPIRES INTEREST OF THEATER GOERS

An event of unusual interest to the theatergoers of Xenia is the coming engagement of the Stratford Players in Shakespeare's great tragedy of "Julius Caesar." This organization is composed of Shakespearean actors of great experience who were formerly members of the company of the late Robert B. Mantell, for many years recognized as the foremost actor of the American stage.

Arrangements have been completed for them to present "Julius Caesar" at Jean B. Elwell Auditorium at Xenia Central High School Tuesday, March 5.

The play is a daring performance in one principal respect in that it takes for its slogan "the play's the thing," and is said to be performed without elaborate stage scenery, bizarre innovations, or other fantastic devices. The emphasis is laid principally in the force of the acting, the quality of the reading and the dignity and clarity with which the age-old lines are enunciated.

"Julius Caesar" was one of the most successful productions of Shakespearean plays made in New York in late years. When presented by the Players Club, the organization's receipts for one week approximated $25,000, proving conclusively the lasting popularity of this renowned tragedy.

WASTEFUL MARKETING CAUSE OF FARMING ILLS SAYS JARDINE

WASHINGTON, March 2.—What's wrong with agriculture?

Ills of the farmers may be laid, in the opinion of Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, to existing "uneconomic and wasteful" marketing methods.

Outlining his views in an exclusive interview with the United Press today, Jardine said the farmers have not kept pace with other American business men in this respect.

"Emphasis has been placed on production, and the marketing end has been neglected," Jardine explained. "What is needed primarily is more efficient marketing methods through cooperative associations.

"The chief trouble with agriculture, and the reason the farmer always goes down first and comes up last in any depression period, is his failure to study markets and keep the selling machinery in his own hands."

The United States, Jardine believes, is capable of consuming vastly more farm products, especially of the perishable fruit and vegetable type, than it now does. In Jardine's opinion, the American farmer would be affected very little by foreign markets if he fully developed the home market.

"People in the thousands of small towns throughout this country are ready and eager to buy more farm products, more fancy vegetables, fruits and similar eatable, if these products can be delivered to them at reasonable cost.

"We must replace the middlemen with cooperative organizations which represent the farmer and which he controls. I do not wish to blame the middle-man—he is only trying to earn his living and the present situation has developed naturally."

"But there's far too many shippers handling the farmer's product, resulting in wasteful dumping of farm goods into the great city terminals. A single strong cooperative, instead of the dozens of middlemen handling each product, could regulate the supply to assure a fair return to the farmer and an ample supply at reasonable prices to the consumer."

When he retires from the cabinet March 4, Jardine will become associated with the federated fruit and vegetable growers, a cooperative organization.

PAPER GATHERER OWNED $11,200

Lawrence Patton, 88-year-old scrap paper picker, of Wilmington, who died last week after having been struck by an automobile, had $11,200 on deposit in two Wilmington banks, it was learned after his death.

An investigation will be conducted for the purpose of determining whether the aged man had moneys in other banks, or hoarded away. Patton, who was supposed to be earning only a meager living by gathering scrap paper, baling and selling it, leaves two daughters, a son and a granddaughter. He is said to have told friends last summer that he had destroyed his will.

FORMER XENIAN IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

Miss Carrie Hopkins, 66, a former Xenian, and only daughter of the late Rev. Thomas L. Hopkins, one time pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, died suddenly in Denver, February 10, according to information received here.

Miss Hopkins was a teacher in the Denver schools for thirty-six years, part of the time in one of the high schools. She was said to have been one of the best known residents of that city and Denver newspapers paid high tribute to her memory. A memorial service held in her honor was attended by persons in all walks of life. Five brothers survive her. Her father was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here in the '80's.

WASTEFUL MARKETING CAUSE OF FARMING ILLS SAYS JARDINE

WASHINGTON, March 2.—What's wrong with agriculture?

Ills of the farmers may be laid, in the opinion of Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, to existing "uneconomic and wasteful" marketing methods.

Outlining his views in an exclusive interview with the United Press today, Jardine said the farmers have not kept pace with other American business men in this respect.

"Emphasis has been placed on production, and the marketing end has been neglected," Jardine explained. "What is needed primarily is more efficient marketing methods through cooperative associations.

"The chief trouble with agriculture, and the reason the farmer always goes down first and comes up last in any depression period, is his failure to study markets and keep the selling machinery in his own hands."

The United States, Jardine believes, is capable of consuming vastly more farm products, especially of the perishable fruit and vegetable type, than it now does. In Jardine's opinion, the American farmer would be affected very little by foreign markets if he fully developed the home market.

"People in the thousands of small towns throughout this country are ready and eager to buy more farm products, more fancy vegetables, fruits and similar eatable, if these products can be delivered to them at reasonable cost.

"We must replace the middlemen with cooperative organizations which represent the farmer and which he controls. I do not wish to blame the middle-man—he is only trying to earn his living and the present situation has developed naturally."

"But there's far too many shippers handling the farmer's product, resulting in wasteful dumping of farm goods into the great city terminals. A single strong cooperative, instead of the dozens of middlemen handling each product, could regulate the supply to assure a fair return to the farmer and an ample supply at reasonable prices to the consumer."

When he retires from the cabinet March 4, Jardine will become associated with the federated fruit and vegetable growers, a cooperative organization.

PAPER GATHERER OWNED $11,200

Lawrence Patton, 88-year-old scrap paper picker, of Wilmington, who died last week after having been struck by an automobile, had $11,200 on deposit in two Wilmington banks, it was learned after his death.

An investigation will be conducted for the purpose of determining whether the aged man had moneys in other banks, or hoarded away. Patton, who was supposed to be earning only a meager living by gathering scrap paper, baling and selling it, leaves two daughters, a son and a granddaughter. He is said to have told friends last summer that he had destroyed his will.

FORMER XENIAN IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

Miss Carrie Hopkins, 66, a former Xenian, and only daughter of the late Rev. Thomas L. Hopkins, one time pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, died suddenly in Denver, February 10, according to information received here.

Miss Hopkins was a teacher in the Denver schools for thirty-six years, part of the time in one of the high schools. She was said to have been one of the best known residents of that city and Denver newspapers paid high tribute to her memory. A memorial service held in her honor was attended by persons in all walks of life. Five brothers survive her. Her father was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here in the '80's.

Weaver of Laurels

Every chevron which has graced the arm of a West Pointer in the past fifty years is the handiwork of Mrs. Louise Regan, whose skill in fashioning the delicate gold lace, black broadcloth and gray fabric cannot be matched. Army officials send her the chevrons to be made, wherever she may be. Incidentally, she steadfastly refused to pose until this was taken.

Mystery Cloaks Death

President Henry Bennett, of Oklahoma A. & M. college, has denied that the death of Miss Pauline Pruitt, above, 17-year-old co-ed of that institution, occurred as the result of a sorority initiation. Reports to relatives of the girl at Wichita Falls, Tex., said that she died shortly after drinking shoe polish given her as castor oil during an initiation. Mystery has surrounded the exact cause of her death, police refusing to divulge details. At her funeral services her sorority sisters said their rites over her body.

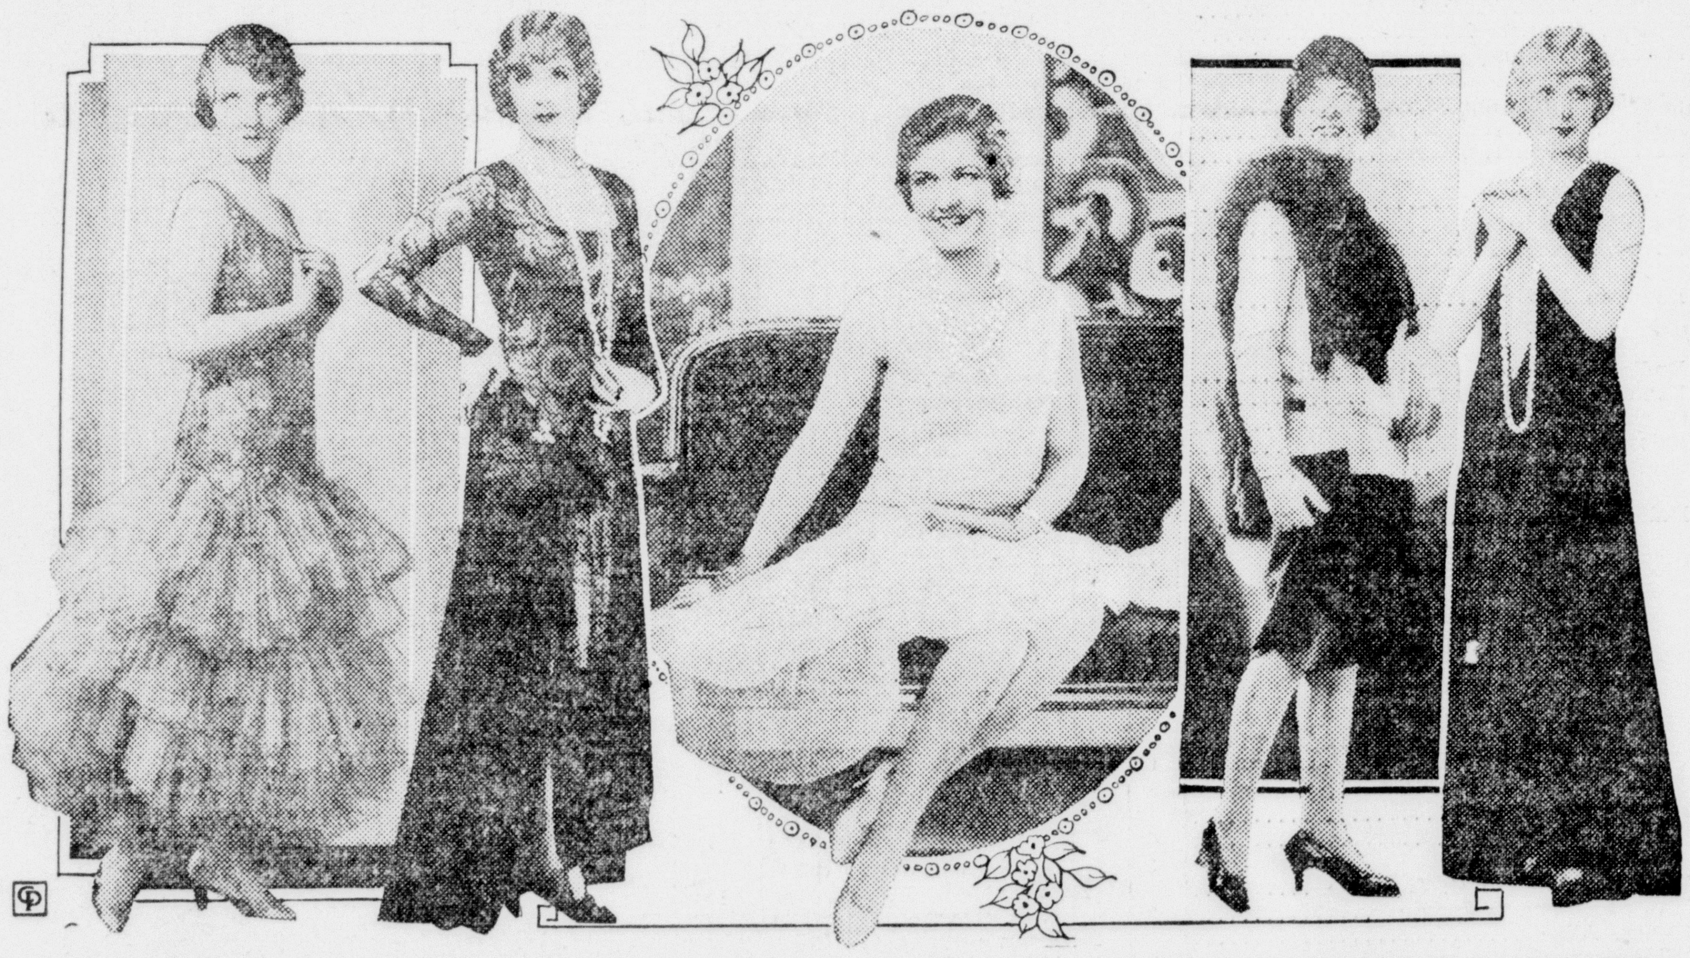
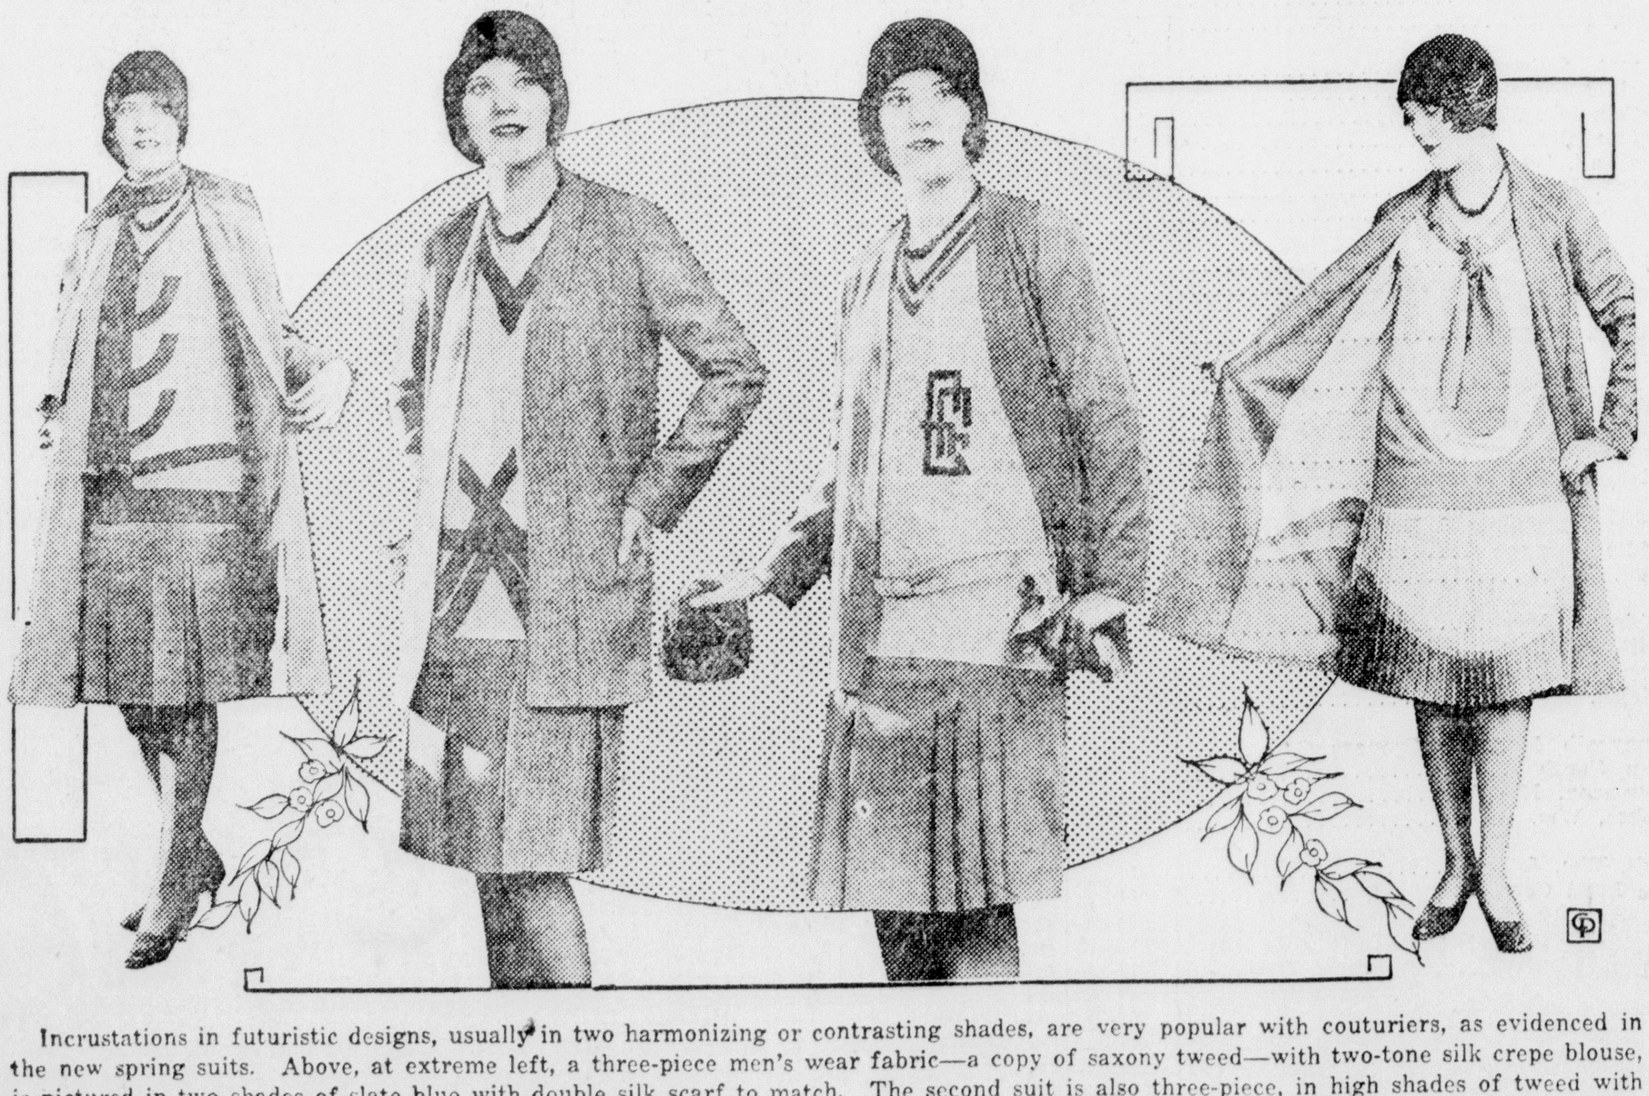
Goebel, winner of the Dole race to Hawaii, and who recently shattered the record for a non-stop flight across the United States, has been recuperating from an illness at Los Angeles, his home. He plans to make the flight in five days, refueling at seven stations, en route. The flight is to start from Wichita, Kas., where his own plane and the seven auxiliary planes are being buil' Five German engineers collaborated with Goebel in designing the plane. HOLLYWOOD REFLECTS SPRING FASHION TRENDS FROM PARIS OPENINGS



Stylists in Paris are all agog over the showings of the great designers and the style tendencies for the spring and summer season. Hollywood reflects these trends in the gowns worn by the beauties of the screen. Pictured here are a few of the latest gowns worn by these well known young women. Left, Lorayne Duval wears an exquisite evening gown with tight bodice of gold sequins and bouffant skirt of tulle ruffles. Margaret Livingston, second to left, shows the effectiveness of a gown of black cire lace—lace is one of the most popular frock mediums this year—form fitting, with inserts of lace and short train. The sleeves are long. In the center Laura LaPlante shows an adorable frock of hand embroidered French batiste with plaited ruffles of net. It is worn over a silk crepe slip of shell pink. The same star poses second from right in a sports costume consisting of black circular skirt with gray knitted overblouse. Margaret Livingston, right, wears a beautiful evening gown of black chiffon velvet with a draped circular skirt

FUTURISTIC INCRUSTATIONS DECORATE THE NEW SPRING SUITS



Incrustations in futuristic designs, usually in two harmonizing or contrasting shades, are very popular with couturiers, as evidenced in the new spring suits. Above, at extreme left, a three-piece men's wear fabric—a copy of saxony tweed—with two-tone silk crepe blouse, is pictured in two shades of slate blue with double silk scarf to match. The second suit is also three-piece, in high shades of tweed with silk blouse, also using a second tone in its incrustations. The costume, second from right, uses wool crepe for jacket and skirt with silk flat crepe for the blouse. The fourth ensemble, right, shows a silk dress with suiting coat and still another example of modernistic trimming in incrustations.

Jersey Torch Victim Still Unknown

Jersey police are following meagre clues to the solution of Jersey's second torch mystery which occurred near the place where Miss Brown was found under similar circumstances one year ago. It is thought possible that the burning woman found by James Boyle, right, was murdered by the same fiend. Her jewelry, lower panel, is of a cheap type. Her coat being examined by detectives, upper left, offers slight clues. From her apparel and from the reconstruction of the scene by the police, upper center, startling similarity is revealed in the two crimes.

Crazed Lawyer Hacks Wife and Son

Reason unseated by great financial loss which he feared to reveal, Gabriel Youngwood, lower right, lawyer of Mount Vernon, N. Y., took his life by poison after chopping his wife and baby son, lower center, with a hatchet. The luxurious home at Mount Vernon, upper right, had been mortgaged to the limit according to the story told Captain Silverstein, left, of local detective force holding poison vial and glass, and fear that his loved ones would face need caused the unbalanced man to attempt taking their lives. Hope is held out that both his victims will live.

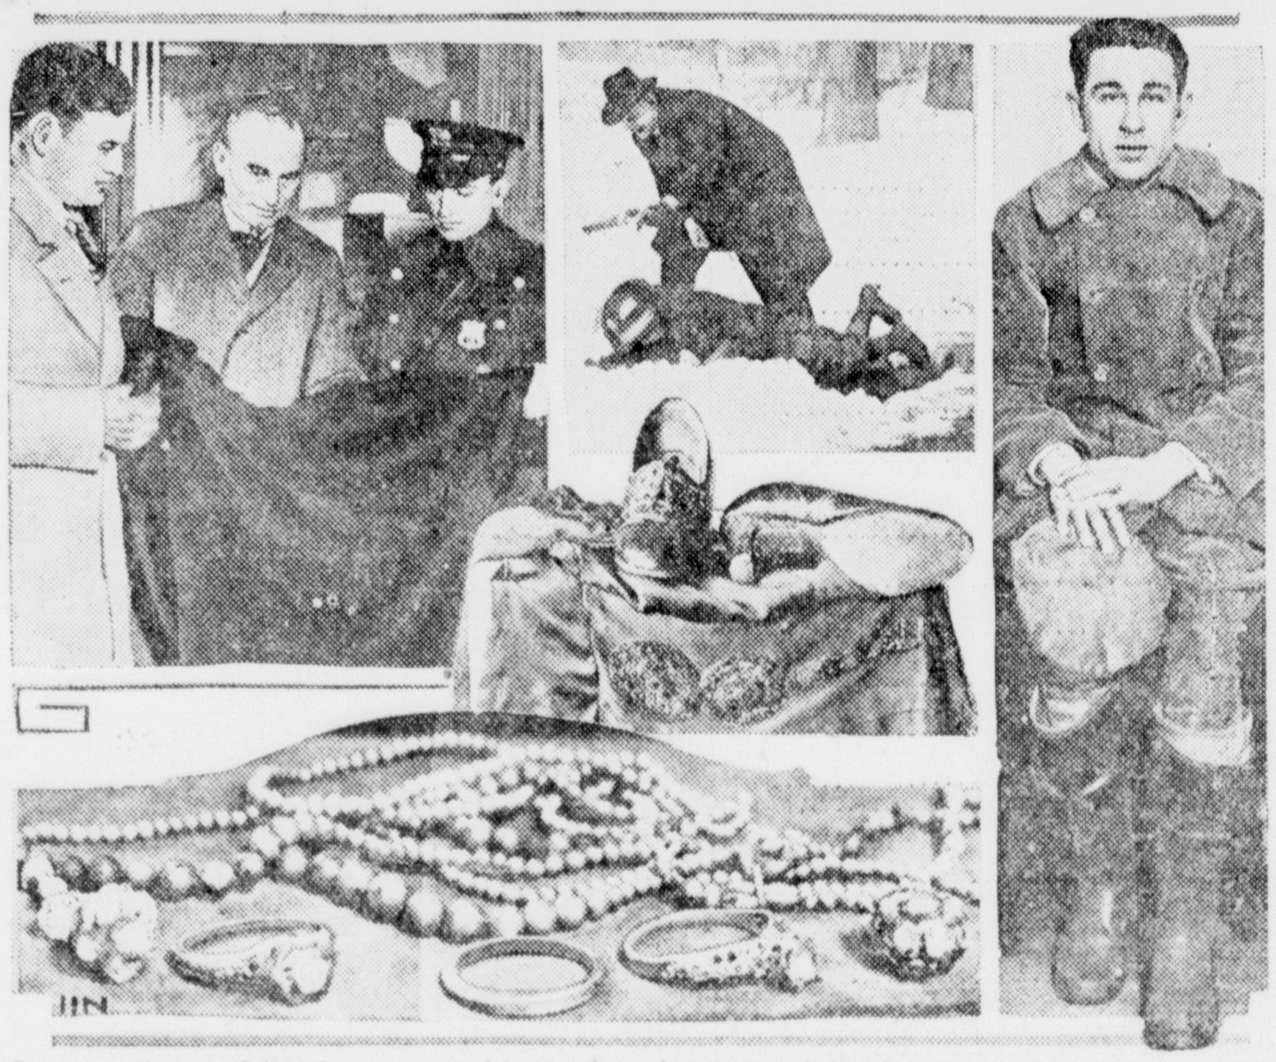
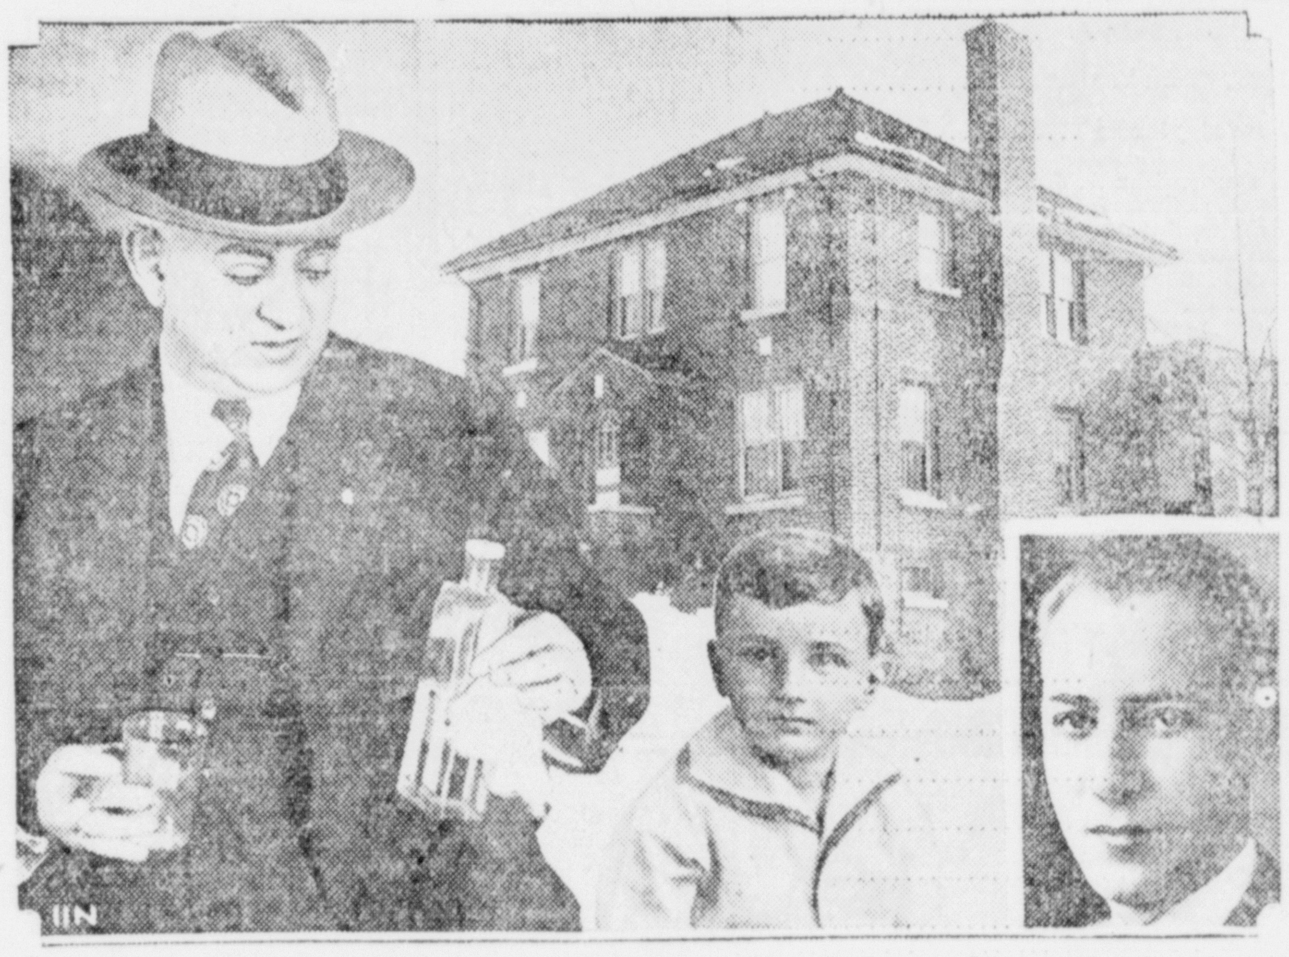
The second suit is also three-piece, in high shades of tweed with silk blouse, also using a second tone in its incrustations. The costume, second from right, uses wool crepe for jacket and skirt with silk flat crepe for the blouse. The fourth ensemble, right, shows a silk dress with suiting coat and still another example of modernistic trimming in incrustations.

Jersey Torch Victim Still Unknown



Jersey police are following meagre clues to the solution of Jersey's second torch mystery which occurred near the place where Miss Brown was found under similar circumstances one year ago. It is thought possible that the burning woman found by James Boyle, right, was murdered by the same fiend. Her jewelry, lower panel, is of a cheap type. Her coat being examined by detectives, upper left, offers slight clues. From her apparel and from the reconstruction of the scene by the police, upper center, startling similarity is revealed in the two crimes.

Crazed Lawyer Hacks Wife and Son



Reason unseated by great financial loss which he feared to reveal, Gabriel Youngwood, lower right, lawyer of Mount Vernon, N. Y., took his life by poison after chopping his wife and baby son, lower center, with a hatchet. The luxurious home at Mount Vernon, upper right, had been mortgaged to the limit according to the story told Captain Silverstein, left, of local detective force holding poison vial and glass, and fear that his loved ones would face need caused the unbalanced man to attempt taking their lives. Hope is held out that both his victims will live.

HUGE CROWDS ATTEND XENIA AUTO SHOW

ESTIMATE 1,100 PEOPLE VISIT AUTO SHOW DURING SECOND DAY

A new record crowd of 1,100 people is estimated to have attended Xenia's second auto show Friday afternoon and night and admired the trim, cruiser-like 1929 models on display.

Local dealers considered this a remarkable testimony of the growing popularity of the exhibit.

The three-day exposition closes Saturday night at 10:30 o'clock and dealers are enthusiastically forecasting an attendance of approximately 3,000 persons for the afternoon and night of the final day.

There are many new features incorporated in the 1929 models. The color combinations are in keeping with the general smart tone. Graceful body lines give an individuality and dash which carry out the best features of the finest body engineering coupled with the latest ideas in quality motor construction.

Appointments have been catered to with a thoroughness that promises to please the most fastidious autoist. Flowing lines, graceful contour of bodies and low-swung effects impart a suggestion of fleetness and trimness.

Features of the new models are increased efficiency, economy, beauty, speed, power and endurance. Many new features also make for driving ease and cars so equipped captured the admiration of show visitors. There is also complete harmony of tone in the upholstery.

Peppy music by Henderson's band from Wilberforce enlivened the evening's entertainment Friday while vocal selections by Mrs. Louise Coffelt, S. Whiteman St., well-known local singer, also contributed to making the program a success.

Admission to the show is by ticket only but the admission charge is small and dealers have plenty of complimentary tickets left to distribute to all persons interested.

Turner's Collegians will supply orchestra music Saturday night.

Society Against Snow Shoveling Favors Snows In Summer At Convention In Xenia Park

Snow falling Saturday while the Society for the Suppression of Snow Shoveling was holding its national convention in the auditorium at Shawnee Park served to stimulate action within the organization to bring about a change in weather conditions.

Benjamin J. Bentback, president, whose horny hands testify to the years of effort he has put in to eliminate snow as a life insurance hazard, sounded the keynote of the convention when he offered a resolution demanding a constitutional amendment to have snow occur during the summer months, leaving winter months cold but dry.

His resolution won immediate support from George J. Callous, editor of the Gillette (Mass.) Blade, who spoke in behalf of the proposal and is credited with winning support that resulted in the convention deciding to memorialize Congress, the U. S. Weather Bureau and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt on the measure.

"The utter absurdity of snow falling during the winter months when it is already cold and gloomy is a challenge to modern science," Callous claimed. "It is needless for me to point out the advantages of a reversal of this system. In the winter time the snow merely adds to the discomforts of the season and sends forth vast hordes of husbands almost daily to the endless task of snow-removing, at a time when the low temperature is a menace to their fingers, toes and ears and violent exercise a threat against the continued functioning of the heart and the continued comfort of the shoulder muscles.

"The advantages of our proposal, however, are patent. Frequently a good, heavy snow fall would bring relief to sweltering humanity on hot summer days, cooling the heat-laden air and succoring the parched sidewalks, cooling them against the blisters of small, barefoot boys. On such occasions as drought, the snow would moisten the earth and lay the dust and the summer sunshine would eliminate all traces of it before it became necessary to sally forth with snow-shovel in hand to eradicate the evidences of a topsy-turvy nature."

Other speakers pointed out the decided lack of sympathy expressed by a hard snow-ball directly behind either ear and that while coasting would be eliminated except on imported snow or the Christmas tree variety, still skating would be in the ascendancy because there would be no snow to cover the ice.

Copies of the resolution were ordered spread upon the minutes after it passed over a vigorous objection interposed by lobbyists for the National Snowshoe and Ski Association.

ORDER CUMMINGS TO STATE HOSPITAL

William Cummings, 42, this city, escaped a sentence of four months in the Cincinnati Workhouse and a fine of $100 and costs when he was pronounced a psychopath and ordered committed to the Dayton State Hospital for treatment by Judge S. C. Wright, following a hearing in Probate Court Friday afternoon.

He submitted to a mental and physical examination by Drs. R. H. Grube and A. D. DeHaven, county and city health commissioners, respectively, who gave their opinion that he is mentally diseased.

The affidavit asserting Cummings was mentally unbalanced and requesting that he be committed to the Dayton hospital was filed by his sister, Mrs. Annie Painter, after her brother had been convicted of assaulting Mrs. Josie M. Garrison, his landlady, with a hammer at her rooming house on S. West St. February 23.

BORER IS CHOICY

The European corn borer seems to prefer some varieties of corn to others, Mr. T. Myers, assistant in agronomy, says, in reporting tests made by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, in the most severely infested area in Ohio.

As a part of the study of the corn borer and its control, the Station compared the infestation of 252 crosses between inbred lines of field corn grown in an early planted series of plots and a late planted series. The plots were side by side on the same soil. The infestation in the first series, planted May 13, varied from 20 to 100 per cent among the different strains. In the second series, the infestation ranged from none on some plots to 80 per cent on others. There was a tendency for the strains that were highly infested in one series to be high in the other.

These 252 strains varied in length of growing season from very early to late maturing. The earliest strains reached the mid-date of silking about 77 days after planting May 13 and 64 days after planting June 10. The latest strains required 97 and 84 days in the respective plantings to reach the silking stage.

When the strains were arranged according to the length of time from planting to silking, it was found that the average infestation was 2.19 per cent less in the first planting and 1.14 per cent less in the second planting for each day of increase in the vegetative period of the strain.

The early strains are thus at a disadvantage in that they carry more corn borers. They are also more readily damaged than the larger, later sorts. On the other hand, Myers points out, if later planting is practiced to reduce infestation, as it has been found to do, early varieties must be planted to secure mature corn at harvest.

Passed Up!

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MADE MEN LIKE HER

By ROE FULKERSON

©1929 by Central Press Association, Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Betty Brown dances for amusement until her parents die, and then is forced to do so professionally. In her professional capacity she attracts many men, but not in the way she wants. A theatrical manager, a man dancer and a city politician, make the mistake of thinking all dancers have lax morals. Betty's school friends linger on the edges of her life, particularly George Harris, who does not like her dancing professionally, and Andy Adair, who punches Jake Daubert, the politician, when he tries to force Betty into his car as she leaves the night club where she is dancing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

* * *

CHAPTER XXVII

Betty's depression over her experience with Jake Daubert the night before was with her when sh awoke. She lay wondering what Andy meant when he said he would make her prove that she had fallen for him.

Was he going to propose marriage to her. She knew Andy's parents were wealthy, and feared that if he tried to marry a professional dancer they would be shocked and interfere. She wished she had not taken up dancing at all, so that if Andy did want to marry her there would be no objection his parents might interpose.

She sighed as she took her bath and went through her usual exercise, the price one must pay for pliable muscles. For some unknown reason she went to the restaurant George Harris managed, for her combination breakfast and lunch. George was so steady and reliable she felt she might absorb some comfort.

He came to her table and spoke, but it was the busy hour. She realized he was more interested in the restaurant than in her. As he stood at her table his eyes wandered here and there over the room. She told him not to let her detain him, and he left with a sigh of relief.

She wandered around the shops, and went to see a moving picture and then to her work at the Iron Door.

"Boss wants to see you," said the head waiter, as she came in. She went to Paxton's table in fear and trembling.

"What happened between you and Jake Daubert?" he asked, in his abrupt way.

"He tried to drag me into his car by force as I left last night," answered Betty.

"What happened before that?"

"He pawed me at the table." Betty put her hand on her knee to illustrate.

"Hum, hum. Your boy friend Andy punched him! I guess you are through, Brown. Don't want diamonds so you will glitter like the rear end of an ice wagon on a June morning, do you? Don't want an apartment, a car and a maid, do you?"

"Not from that fat pig!" cried Betty. "Why do you say that I am through?"

"You are through dancing in this town!" explained Paxton. "That fat bird runs this city. If I keep you here he will make me close at twelve o'clock. He will have me raided for selling liquor. His men will say they bought it here, although you know we don't sell it. He'll frame me or anybody else who hires you. That's the only way he can get back for that punch."

"You mean he will have me discharged?"

"He has already done it!" answered Paxton. "I'd like to take a punch at him myself, but what can I do? If you go I stay open. If you don't I get raided. One of his wardmen has already told me I better let you go, and that's that. I'm sorry, kid."

"I can't blame you." Betty rose. She was afraid to say more, lest she cry. She went to the dressing room to get her make-up box and costumes.

"Hey, Brown!" exclaimed one of the girls. "Saw you vamping Jake Daubert last night. In soft, eh? Say, that fat bird has dough enough to start a bakery, and is loose as ashes with it!"

"He had me discharged because I wouldn't let him paw me!" said Betty, sadly.

"Dirty pig!" exclaimed the girl in ready sympathy. "He couldn't pet me for all his money. I'm sorry, kid!"

Fearing she would break down if she received more sympathy, Betty packed her costume and fled to her room, there to throw herself on the bed and sob out the discouragement she felt so deeply.

She had pleased the patrons of the Iron Door with her dancing. When acting as a hostess at one of the tables she had tried her best to chat pleasantly. To have this man feel that he could insult her with impunity because she exposed her body in her dancing made her realize more than ever her mistake in taking up this work.

She thought of telling George Harris, and asking for a position as waitress, bookkeeper, or anything which would pay her enough on which to live. She still had her pride, however, and decided that she would not go to George until she had exhausted every possibility of making her way dancing.

The stage manager at the Orpheum had been rough, but just. She hoped she might get work there, and went to sleep a bit buoyed up.

The following day she went to the Orpheum and asked the stage manager if he had anything for her to do.

"You are too tall for the chorus, as you know. Mighty few chances for solo work here. We go in for high-class family stuff, anyhow, and you are not in so good in this town. You can't mix up with Jake Daubert and get work in nice places."

"What do you mean?" asked Betty.

"Seen this week's Tattler?" he asked. The Tattler was a weekly of the sensational type, which dwelt largely in scandal.

"I never read it."

"Better read this number." The stage manager turned away.

Betty reluctantly left the theater and bought the Tattler a a newsstand. Fearing to read it in the street, she returned to her room to find the following paragraph in its Night Life of the Town column.

"A comedy sketch which might be entitled 'The Spider and the Fly' was put on at one of the popular night clubs this week. Betty is a beautiful dancer, slim and agile. She played the part of the fly. The spider was a rotund gentleman of the oily villain type. He looked on Betty and found her good. After the club closed he waited for her in a truly villainous way, big limousine purring at the curb, smiling spider at the entrance. But the fly was reluctant, as she had a date with another spider, a scion of a wealthy family.

"The villain grasped the lovely gal by the wrist and tried to drag her into the waiting car, when lo and behold, the hero appeared on the scene. Without taking the trouble to exclaim: 'Unhand that gal, you villain!' he punched the fat man in the snoot and below the belt and, leaving him in the gutter, vanished in a high-powered car with the gal.

"The next morning several politicians were insulted, three policemen were fired, and local politics generally upset because the fat man had a black eye. Betty is strangely missing from the night club."

The injustice of it struck Betty first. Her name was mentioned while those of Daubert and Andy Adair were omitted. She was fair game for anyone, but the Tattler had not dared to mention the name of a powerful politician or the son of a wealthy family.

She realized where she had drifted. When the incident occurred she was happy that two men had actually come to blows over her. In high school she had no lovers because she went in for culture. The boys had considered her high brow, and had left her out of their parties. She recalled the night at the country club, when she watched the petting parties and decided she was being left out of something interesting. Then she studied dancing to make herself attractive to men, and this was what it brought her!

She felt contaminated. The Tattler was read by half the people in the city for no other reason than to get bits of gossip legitimate newspapers would not print. All these people would know that she had been mixed up in a street brawl and had men fighting over her. She was glad her parents were not alive to read it. A knock on the door. At Betty's request her landlady entered.

"I see you have read it, too!" She pointed at the Tattler in Betty's lap. "I'm sorry, Miss Brown, and I'm not saying you aren't all right and all that, but my roomers complain about your coming in so late at night. It wakes them up.

"I've told them you are a good girl. I've never known you to do anything you ought not to do, and all that. But I have to make my living out of my rooms. You know what it means for a rooming house to get a bad name.

"I don't want to rush you, but as soon as you can. I wish you would find another room. Your rent is up a week from Saturday. Mind you, I'm not saying a word against you, Miss Brown, but when my roomers read that they are going to come to me with it, and I thought I better see you first and all—

"I see what you mean," said Betty, dully. She wanted to interrupt the stream of talk before she screamed. "You want me to move."

"Yes, Miss Brown. I'm not saying there is anything wrong, but you know how people talk and all and—"

"I'll leave a week from Saturday," interrupted Betty, rising.

"I'm sorry," answered the woman, as she left the room.

Ordered out in the street as an undesirable! Betty dropped on her bed and bitter sobs shook her.

PREPARES BOOK ON MINIMUM WAGE LAW

It took extensive research work in many foreign countries before Professor Rudolph Broda, of Antioch College, who made a compilation on the minimum wage legislation in various countries which was published in book form last December, could satisfy the demands of the United States department of labor, which stipulated that it must have the original sources of his information listed.

It took many months to comply with the severe regulations of the bureau of labor statistics. Last summer he explored Mexico and South America gathering the desired information. Previously he had traversed the European, Australian and Asiatic continents.

Prof. Broda had his choice between the rigid bureau of statistics and the League of Nations, which he knew would have accepted his work for publication immediately without need for additional information, but he chose the former.

Passed Up! THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO MADE MEN LIKE HER

By ROE FULKERSON

© 1929 by Central Press Association, Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Betty Brown dances for amusement until her parents die, and then is forced to do so professionally. In her professional capacity she attracts many men, but not in the way she wants. A theatrical manager, a man dancer and a city politician, make the mistake of thinking all dancers have lax morals. Betty's school friends linger on the edges of her life, particularly George Harris, who does not like her dancing professionally, and Andy Adair, who punches Jake Daubert, the politician, when he tries to force Betty into his car as she leaves the night club where she is dancing.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

* * *

CHAPTER XXVII

Betty's depression over her experience with Jake Daubert the night before was with her when sh awoke. She lay wondering what Andy meant when he said he would make her prove that she had fallen for him.

Was he going to propose marriage to her. She knew Andy's parents were wealthy, and feared that if he tried to marry a professional dancer they would be shocked and interfere. She wished she had not taken up dancing at all, so that if Andy did want to marry her there would be no objection his parents might interpose.

She sighed as she took her bath and went through her usual exercise, the price one must pay for pliable muscles. For some unknown reason she went to the restaurant George Harris managed, for her combination breakfast and lunch. George was so steady and reliable she felt she might absorb some comfort.

He came to her table and spoke, but it was the busy hour. She realized he was more interested in the restaurant than in her. As he stood at her table his eyes wandered here and there over the room. She told him not to let her detain him, and he left with a sigh of relief.

She wandered around the shops, and went to see a moving picture and then to her work at the Iron Door.

"Boss wants to see you," said the head waiter, as she came in. She went to Paxton's table in fear and trembling.

"What happened between you and Jake Daubert?" he asked, in his abrupt way.

"He tried to drag me into his car by force as I left last night," answered Betty.

"What happened before that?"

"He pawed me at the table." Betty put her hand on her knee to illustrate.

"Hum, hum. Your boy friend Andy punched him! I guess you are through, Brown. Don't want diamonds so you will glitter like the rear end of an ice wagon on a June morning, do you? Don't want an apartment, a car and a maid, do you?"

"Not from that fat pig!" cried Betty. "Why do you say that I am through?"

"You are through dancing in this town!" explained Paxton. "That fat bird runs this city. If I keep you here he will make me close at twelve o'clock. He will have me raided for selling liquor. His men will say they bought it here, although you know we don't sell it. He'll frame me or anybody else who hires you. That's the only way he can get back for that punch."

"You mean he will have me discharged?"

"He has already done it!" answered Paxton. "I'd like to take a punch at him myself, but what can I do? If you go I stay open. If you don't I get raided. One of his wardmen has already told me I better let you go, and that's that. I'm sorry, kid."

"I can't blame you." Betty rose. She was afraid to say more, lest she cry. She went to the dressing room to get her make-up box and costumes.

"Hey, Brown!" exclaimed one of the girls. "Saw you vamping Jake Daubert last night. In soft, eh? Say, that fat bird has dough enough to start a bakery, and is loose as ashes with it!"

"He had me discharged because I wouldn't let him paw me!" said Betty, sadly.

"Dirty pig!" exclaimed the girl in ready sympathy. "He couldn't pet me for all his money. I'm sorry, kid!"

Fearing she would break down if she received more sympathy, Betty packed her costume and fled to her room, there to throw herself on the bed and sob out the discouragement she felt so deeply.

She had pleased the patrons of the Iron Door with her dancing. When acting as a hostess at one of the tables she had tried her best to chat pleasantly. To have this man feel that he could insult her with impunity because she exposed her body in her dancing made her realize more than ever her mistake in taking up this work.

She thought of telling George Harris, and asking for a position as waitress, bookkeeper, or anything which would pay her enough on which to live. She still had her pride, however, and decided that she would not go to George until she had exhausted every possibility of making her way dancing.

The stage manager at the Orpheum had been rough, but just. She hoped she might get work there, and went to sleep a bit buoyed up.

The following day she went to the Orpheum and asked the stage manager if he had anything for her to do.

"You are too tall for the chorus, as you know. Mighty few chances for solo work here. We go in for high-class family stuff, anyhow, and you are not in so good in this town. You can't mix up with Jake Daubert and get work in nice places."

"What do you mean?" asked Betty.

"Seen this week's Tattler?" he asked. The Tattler was a weekly of the sensational type, which dwelt largely in scandal.

"I never read it."

"Better read this number." The stage manager turned away.

Betty reluctantly left the theater and bought the Tattler a a newsstand. Fearing to read it in the street, she returned to her room to find the following paragraph in its Night Life of the Town column.

"A comedy sketch which might be entitled 'The Spider and the Fly' was put on at one of the popular night clubs this week. Betty is a beautiful dancer, slim and agile. She played the part of the fly. The spider was a rotund gentleman of the oily villain type. He looked on Betty and found her good. After the club closed he waited for her in a truly villainous way, big limousine purring at the curb, smiling spider at the entrance. But the fly was reluctant, as she had a date with another spider, a scion of a wealthy family.

"The villain grasped the lovely gal by the wrist and tried to drag her into the waiting car, when lo and behold, the hero appeared on the scene. Without taking the trouble to exclaim: 'Unhand that gal, you villain!' he punched the fat man in the snoot and below the belt and, leaving him in the gutter, vanished in a high-powered car with the gal.

"The next morning several politicians were insulted, three policemen were fired, and local politics generally upset because the fat man had a black eye. Betty is strangely missing from the night club."

The injustice of it struck Betty first. Her name was mentioned while those of Daubert and Andy Adair were omitted. She was fair game for anyone, but the Tattler had not dared to mention the name of a powerful politician or the son of a wealthy family.

She realized where she had drifted. When the incident occurred she was happy that two men had actually come to blows over her. In high school she had no lovers because she went in for culture. The boys had considered her high brow, and had left her out of their parties. She recalled the night at the country club, when she watched the petting parties and decided she was being left out of something interesting. Then she studied dancing to make herself attractive to men, and this was what it brought her!

She felt contaminated. The Tattler was read by half the people in the city for no other reason than to get bits of gossip legitimate newspapers would not print. All these people would know that she had been mixed up in a street brawl and had men fighting over her. She was glad her parents were not alive to read it. A knock on the door. At Betty's request her landlady entered.

"I see you have read it, too!" She pointed at the Tattler in Betty's lap. "I'm sorry, Miss Brown, and I'm not saying you aren't all right and all that, but my roomers complain about your coming in so late at night. It wakes them up.

"I've told them you are a good girl. I've never known you to do anything you ought not to do, and all that. But I have to make my living out of my rooms. You know what it means for a rooming house to get a bad name.

"I don't want to rush you, but as soon as you can, I wish you would find another room. Your rent is up a week from Saturday. Mind you, I'm not saying a word against you, Miss Brown, but when my roomers read that they are going to come to me with it, and I thought I better see you first and all—

"I see what you mean," said Betty, dully. She wanted to interrupt the stream of talk before she screamed. "You want me to move."

"Yes, Miss Brown. I'm not saying there is anything wrong, but you know how people talk and all and—"

"I'll leave a week from Saturday," interrupted Betty, rising.

"I'm sorry," answered the woman, as she left the room.

Ordered out in the street as an undesirable! Betty dropped on her bed and bitter sobs shook her.

PREPARES BOOK ON MINIMUM WAGE LAW

It took extensive research work in many foreign countries before Professor Rudolph Broda, of Antioch College, who made a compilation on the minimum wage legislation in various countries which was published in book form last December, could satisfy the demands of the United States department of labor, which stipulated that it must have the original sources of his information listed.

It took many months to comply with the severe regulations of the bureau of labor statistics. Last summer he explored Mexico and South America gathering the desired information. Previously he had traversed the European, Australian and Asiatic continents.

Prof. Broda had his choice between the rigid bureau of statistics and the League of Nations, which he knew would have accepted his work for publication immediately without need for additional information, but he chose the former.

The Theater

Six years ago a youth named Richard Thomas purchased for $6,000 a story called "The Woman Forgotten," and recently he refused an offer of $50,000 for it.

The story concerns a school teacher and Mr. Thomas desired to interest school teachers of the country in its production. It is said that a powerful producer brought it to the attention of Mr. Crabtree, head of the National Board of Education.

Mr. Crabtree asked what his share would be and on being told $25,000 was not interested. Thomas meanwhile interested many teachers in the picture, some of them sending him money to carry out his plans. With the proceeds he proposed to build a home for aged teachers.

Mr. Crabtree again sent for the idealist. He again asked what his share would be, but when Thomas started for the door he called him back. To make a long story short, production on "The Woman Forgotten" started Friday at the Mack Sennett studio with Belle Bennett in the school teacher role and Jobyna Ralston as the ingenue.

Twelve prominent producers are financially interested. It will be premiered in Washington under auspices of Mr. Crabtree and the National Board of Education. Twenty-five per cent of the profits go to that organization for the home for the aged. Henry Ford, Thomas Edison, Col. Lindbergh and others have consented to appear in the picture.

Laura Hope Crewes who went to Hollywood to teach English to Norma Talmadge and Gilbert Roland, has permanently divorced Broadway and the legitimate. She has leased the Frank Tuttles home on Beachwood Drive and bought her first automobile, a Ford coupe. When the car wouldn't run the other day, she accepted "pushes" by a number of men until she finally coasted to a gasoline station and learned the car was dry. Laura didn't know new cars are delivered minus the liquid essentials.

"Kibitzer", the new comedy featuring Edward G. Robinson at the Royale Theater, New York, has scored, it is reported. Heywood Broun said: "'Kibitzer' is, for my taste, a fine show because of the pitfalls which it avoids. Edward G. Robinson, the featured player, suggests very strongly the David Warfield of 'The Music Master' . . . It does not aim at conviction but merely at entertainment and nothing happened which seemed to me too large a bulk to be swallowed during the course of an engaging play." Robinson is part author of the play.

Dr. W. A. Galloway has become a member of the "doctors' auto club" of Xenia, having purchased a fine passenger Ford touring car in which he will go to visit his patients in the future. He has been afflicted with "auto fever" for some time but is now pronounced as cured.

Robert Kingsbury, Jr., who is a student at the St. John Military Academy at Manlius, N. Y., will be one of several hundred students of this school who will march in the Taft inaugural parade Thursday.

Mr. W. R. Torrence, of the Pennsylvania freight office, left for Washington, D. C. to attend the inaugural ceremonies.

Greene County Teams Fall Fast In Tourney

SPORT SHOTS

FRAMED BY PHIL

Xenia Central High School's "Buccaneers" have written "finis" on one of the most successful basketball seasons ever experienced by Central. The Bucs wound up with a record of twelve victories and three defeats, the black marks resulting from two defeats by Dayton Stivers and one by Middletown.

Xenia went down to an expected defeat again at the hands of Stivers in the first round of the regional tourney at Springfield Friday, but the overwhelming score of 45 to 12 came as a distinct shock to fans who had predicted at least as close a game as that of last Tuesday with the Orange Crusher, which ended 37 to 22.

Xenia went entirely to pieces in the second half after holding Stivers to a 17 to 7 count at the half. The entire Stivers second team played the last quarter.

The Bucs registered only three field goals. Buell, returning to center, scored six points while Scurry made five and Weaver, one.

During the fifteen games played this season Central amassed a total of 386 points against 331 for opposing teams. This is an average of twenty-five per game against an average of twenty-one for opponents. Here is the season's record:

Xenia 15, Leesburg 13.
Xenia 18, Wilmington 13.
Xenia 30, Columbus East 28.
Xenia 21, Sidney 16.
Xenia 32, Troy 9.
Xenia 52, Miamisburg 16.
Xenia 18, Middletown 27.
Xenia 27, Dayton Preps 18.
Xenia 32, Washington C. H. 20.
Xenia 29, Delaware 27 (overtime).
Xenia 21, Greenville 20.
Xenia 33, Piqua 21.
Xenia 24, Springfield 21.
Xenia 22, Dayton Stivers 37.
Xenia 12, Dayton Stivers 45.

* * *

Unlucky "thirteen" proved lucky and reversing the usual procedure, lucky "seven" was unlucky for the Bucs during the past basketball campaign. Playing its thirteenth game of the season, Xenia defeated Piqua to win basketball title of the Miami Valley League for the second straight year. On the other hand, the Bucs twice during the season compiled a winning streak of six straight games but could not make it seven in a row, the Middies spoiling the first streak and Dayton Stivers the second.

* * *

Ralph Scurry, senior, playing his first season as a regular on Xenia Central High's basketball team, was the individual high scorer on the team during the season just closed. Scurry, a forward, registered a total of 101 points in the fifteen games played. He recorded forty-three field goals and fifteen free throws. While Scurry shot the most baskets, Gibney led the foul shooting with eighteen charity shots. Gib was also runnerup for high-point honors with sixty-eight with three other regulars close behind. Here is a summary of the individual scoring:

Player	Field	Foul	TP.
Scurry	43	15	101
Gibney	25	18	68
Bell	26	11	63
Smittle	24	14	62
Buell	25	10	60
Weaver	6	5	17
Hurley	5	5	15

* * *

The Stivers game at Springfield Friday was the swan song for four members of the Buccaneer basketball team, who are seniors and have terminated their athletic careers for the school. Graduation will take Robert Buell, center; John Gibney, star guard; Ralph Scurry, high-scoring forward, and Paul Weaver, sub forward, from the team.

However, there is a silver lining because Joe Smittle, junior; Birch Bell, sophomore; John Hurley, junior; John Schleppi, junior; Lester Price, sophomore, and Edgar Michael, sophomore, will be available for the court squad next year.

WASHINGTON ALLEY STARS BEAT XENIA

By a margin of 287 pins a Xenia all-star bowling quintet was defeated by the Washington C. H. Imperials in a return inter-city match at Washington Friday night. The winners amassed a three-game total of 2,513 while the Xenia pinsters rolled poorly. Box score:

STORM DELAYS AIR MAIL PILOT

HADLEY FIELD, NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 2.—National Air Transport Pilot P. Underhill landed here at 4 a. m. today, several hours late from Cleveland, because of a storm which forced him to fly far off his course, officials of the airport reported.

They had received no report from Underhill that he had been forced to land in Connecticut, officials said.

BOY IS DROWNED

WARREN, O., March 2.—While jumping from one cake of ice to another in the Mahoning River at Packard Park near here, Alvin Fritz, 11, fell into the water and was drowned. Fritz and several companions were playing on the ice close to the shore and when the ice started to break away, young Fritz attempted to make a leap that was too great for him.

THREE ENTRANTS IN CLASS B DEFEATED; XENIA ELIMINATED

East High Survives; Boys Place In Foul Shooting

(BULLETIN)

Xenia East High School, Greene County's last surviving representative in the Class B division of the sectional tournament at Springfield, was downed by St. Paris after a close battle, 21 to 20 in the second round Saturday morning. East had drawn a bye the first round.

St. Paris, holding victories over Bradford, 30 to 28, and Xenia East, 21 to 20, will next play Logan at 5:35 p. m. Saturday. Logan defeated Holy Angels of Sidney in the same group, 25 to 19 Saturday morning.

In another second round engagement Saturday morning, Centerville, a Montgomery County representative, beat New Madison 36 to 17 and will play the winner of the West Carrollton - Arcanum game at 7 p. m. Saturday.

Four Greene County teams passed out of the picture in the first round of the Class A and Class B sectional basketball tournament at Springfield Friday.

Xenia Central fell before Dayton Stivers, 45 to 12 in a Class A contest. In the Class B division, Spring Valley was eliminated by Rushsylvania, 26 to 15, Bellbrook was beaten by North Hampton, 36 to 19, and Bath Twp., was nosed out by Pleasant Hill, 36 to 32.

The only Greene County representative which weathered the opening round was Xenia East High School, which drew a bye and was scheduled to meet St. Paris Saturday morning.

Surviving teams in the Class A division are Urbana, Sidney, Stivers, Kiser, Fairview, Steele, Chaminade and Roosevelt. It is peculiar that out of six Class A games played Friday, six Dayton schools emerged victorious. Urbana and Sidney drew byes the first round.

In the foul shooting contest being staged in connection with the tournament, two Greene County entrants are tied for second place in the boys' division. Robert Crites, Spring Valley, winner of the free throw contest held in connection with the recent county tourney, made seventeen successful shots out of twenty, while Herbert McKay, Caesarcreek, also connected with seventeen fouls.

The foul shooting contest is being staged at the Springfield Y. M. C. A. gym and was being continued Saturday with eighteen more entries in line to shoot.

Following is a list of all the scores in the sixteen games played in both divisions of the tourney Friday:

CLASS A

Kiser, 22; Greenville, 18.
Stivers, 45; Xenia Central, 12.
Fairview, 29; Bellefontaine, 9.
Steele, 26; Piqua, 24.

Roosevelt, 33; Troy, 6.

CLASS B

TRAINMEN KILLED IN RAIL COLLISION

POTTSVILLE, Pa., March 2.—Two men were instantly killed at St. Clair, near here, early today when thirty-five heavily loaded freight cars ran wild down a steep incline and crashed into an engine and caboose standing in the Reading Railroad yard. The dead:

Guy Frantz, 33, St. Clair, Reading Railroad engineer; Joseph Hartnett, Schuylkill Haven, brakeman. John Howells, 24, Port Carbon, another member of the train crew was taken from the wreckage of the caboost and rushed to a hospital here in a critical condition.

FURTHER RAIN ADDS TO FLOOD MENACE

ATLANTA, Ga., March 2.—Rainfall today in this state and Alabama will bring about extremely serious flood conditions in sections already suffering loss of life and tied-up transportation. Dozens of bridges are already reported weakened and another heavy flow of water will sweep them away.

The loss of life to date, apparently confined to Georgia, has reached nine lives. Alabama, North and South Carolina, and Mississippi have suffered less, the destruction being confined to washed out roads and bridges, caused by the worst flood conditions in ten years.

Damage to crops has been enormous.

$44,000 Bench Star Goes to Newark

MIKE GAZELLA, above, is baseball's highest priced "sitter." For four years he has graced the bench of the Yankee dugout at a total intake of approximately $44,000, including the proceeds from four full World's Series cuts.

In four years he has played at only rare intervals. His first appearance was in 1923, when he sat out a season and a world series and drew down $11,000, of which $6,200 was series money. In 1924 and '25 he was in the minors, but he returned in 1926 and sat and sat and sat—to the tune of $6,000 and world series dough. He did it again in 1927 and in 1928 he got a thousand extra for polishing the woodwork in addition to the series coin.

Now Mike goes to Newark, where under Tris Speaker's eagle eye, he probably will start doing calisthenics—or something.

DR. BIBLE SPEAKS; CHURCH ORGANIZES CANVASS AT DINNER

Responsibility toward those outside the church, and to the various agencies making up the world-wide work of the denomination, were featured by Dr. Frank Bible, Chicago, central states executive for the Board of Foreign Missions, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. when he addressed the men's dinner meeting at the First Presbyterian Church Friday evening.

Dr. Bible, who was for thirteen years a missionary to China, talked on some of the conditions in that country, his experiences in famine relief work there, and his travels through other countries in missionary labors.

He spoke of the need of support of the various agencies within the church; Christian education, boards of national and foreign missions and pensions. Dr. Bible is visiting all churches in Dayton Presbyterial, preliminary to the annual "Every Member Canvass" March 10.

On that date the local congregation hopes to raise between $5,000 and $6,000 for local and world-wide work of the church.

F. L. Smith was chairman for the dinner meeting, which was followed by a conference beween Dr. Bible and the "Every Member Canvass" committee of which George P. Tiffany is chairman. Mr. Tiffany has organized thirty men of the congregation for the one day canvass.

Dinner Friday evening was served by a committee composed of the circle chairmen in the Ladies' Aid Society.

TAILOR GAGGED, THEN ROBBED

AKRON, March 2.—Bound hand and foot and gagged by two robbers, Joseph Leeper, 65-year-old tailor, nearly strangled to death in his shop here last night. He was rescued by his wife.

Measurements taken by Leeper as the bandits tried on suits before they robbed the tailor may identify them, police said.

The robbers escaped with $17, a watch, and a knife.

Veteran Giant Pitcher Keeps Pace with Youngsters

Jack Scott Regarded as Regular on McGraw Baseballers

JACK SCOTT
(International Newsreel)

LIKE the "old gal" who insists on playing around with the younger set, just to show how young she is, Jack Scott, Phillie cast-off, is cavorting around the training lot with the liveliest of the rookies.

That name cast-off has a vicious sound, but Jack, at age 35, only one year ago was sent to the minors—Toledo, to be exact—by the Phillies, as all through. He hadn't been there long before the Yankees came along with a dazzling offer for the veteran. It was ordained, however, that he return to the big show under John McGraw through one of those arrangements that exists between the Giants and Toledo.

He had served two previous terms with the Giants, doing a nice job of starting and relieving. Weighing 205 and standing six-one, Jack has always known how and why to take care of his physical being and hard training isn't work for him. Scotty spends his winters raising hogs and reports ready to hurl 'em as fast as some pitchers who have a couple of weeks' work under their belts.

Perhaps his fast one has lost some of its hop and his curve is nothing to boast about. He still has control, courage and knowledge of batters. That's a lot more than many pitchers can boast of and ought to come in handy to the Giants.

Anyhow, you've got to take your hat off to the boy. He's getting away with it and more than keeping to the pace of the youngster in spite of his graying hairs.

KIDNAPED CHILD WAS WITH MOTHER

IRONTON, O., March 2—Abducted three days ago from a school building here, Eloise Milan, 8, had been returned to her home today by Elmer Milan, her father.

Milan said he found the girl at Kenova, W. Va., living with Mrs. Jeannette Milan, his divorced wife. He told authorities he had dropped kidnaping charges against his former wife upon her promise never to bother any of her children again.

When the Milans were divorced, the court awarded custody of all the children, two girls and a boy, to the father. But later Edward, 10, declared he wanted to live with his mother and Milan permitted him to do so.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 2.—The physician accused of giving morphine prescriptions to Alma Rubens, film actress, will be permitted to testify at his own request in the federal investigation of the narcotic situation here.

Dr. I. Jesse Citron, the physician, was not subpoenaed by the jury but asked to appear. Ricardo Cortez, screen actor and husband of Miss Rubens, and Mrs. Teresa Rubens, her mother, have been called.

MARCH WOLF IN SHEEPSKIN

Decided lamb-like tendencies were exhibited by March, which arrived Friday, and Xenians most sympathetically susceptible again felt faint symptoms of the perennial spring malady.

Saturday's weather, however, did not collaborate effectively with the usual tired working man's afternoon off. Approximately the same temperature is predicted for Sunday with the cooling off process scheduled to continue.

LINEMAN HURT AS AUTO HITS TRUCK

O. Karr, an employe of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co., suffered a broken leg when an auto with an Indiana license collided with a telephone company service truck late Friday afternoon on the Dayton-Fairfield Pike, south of Fairfield.

Karr is a member of the cable splicer's crew. Several other men in the truck were also hurt, but not seriously.

The collision occurred when the Indiana car, swerving to avoid striking a stalled auto occupied by Mrs. W. A. Martin, Osborn, crashed into the truck while traveling at a high rate of speed. The gasoline supply of the Martin car had become exhausted.

R. H. Hunter, driver of the truck, received minor bruises.

Greene County Teams Fall Fast In Tourney

SPORT SHOTS

FRAMED BY PHIL

Xenia Central High School's "Buccaneers" have written "finis" on one of the most successful basketball seasons ever experienced by Central. The Bucs wound up with a record of twelve victories and three defeats, the black marks resulting from two defeats by Dayton Stivers and one by Middletown.

Xenia went down to an expected defeat again at the hands of Stivers in the first round of the regional tourney at Springfield Friday, but the overwhelming score of 45 to 12 came as a distinct shock to fans who had predicted at least as close a game as that of last Tuesday with the Orange Crusher, which ended 37 to 22.

Xenia went entirely to pieces in the second half after holding Stivers to a 17 to 7 count at the half. The entire Stivers second team played the last quarter.

The Bucs registered only three field goals. Buell, returning to center, scored six points while Scurry made five and Weaver, one.

During the fifteen games played this season Central amassed a total of 386 points against 331 for opposing teams. This is an average of twenty-five per game against an average of twenty-one for opponents. Here is the season's record:

Xenia 15, Leesburg 13.
Xenia 18, Wilmington 13.
Xenia 30, Columbus East 28.
Xenia 21, Sidney 16.
Xenia 32, Troy 9.
Xenia 52, Miamisburg 16.
Xenia 18, Middletown 27.
Xenia 27, Dayton Preps 18.
Xenia 32, Washington C. H. 20.
Xenia 29, Delaware 27 (overtime).
Xenia 21, Greenville 20.
Xenia 33, Piqua 21.
Xenia 24, Springfield 21.
Xenia 22, Dayton Stivers 37.
Xenia 12, Dayton Stivers 45.

* * *

Unlucky "thirteen" proved lucky and reversing the usual procedure, lucky "seven" was unlucky for the Bucs during the past basketball campaign. Playing its thirteenth game of the season, Xenia defeated Piqua to win basketball title of the Miami Valley League for the second straight year. On the other hand, the Bucs twice during the season compiled a winning streak of six straight games but could not make it seven in a row, the Middies spoiling the first streak and Dayton Stivers the second.

* * *

Ralph Scurry, senior, playing his first season as a regular on Xenia Central High's basketball team, was the individual high scorer on the team during the season just closed. Scurry, a forward, registered a total of 101 points in the fifteen games played. He recorded forty-three field goals and fifteen free throws. While Scurry shot the most baskets, Gibney led the foul shooting with eighteen charity shots. Gib was also runnerup for high-point honors with sixty-eight with three other regulars close behind. Here is a summary of the individual scoring:

Player	Field	Foul	TP.
Scurry	43	15	101
Gibney	25	18	68
Bell	26	11	63
Smittle	24	14	62
Buell	25	10	60
Weaver	6	5	17
Hurley	5	5	15

* * *

The Stivers game at Springfield Friday was the swan song for four members of the Buccaneer basketball team, who are seniors and have terminated their athletic careers for the school. Graduation will take Robert Buell, center; John Gibney, star guard; Ralph Scurry, high-scoring forward, and Paul Weaver, sub forward, from the team.

However, there is a silver lining because Joe Smittle, junior; Birch Bell, sophomore; John Hurley, junior; John Schleppi, junior; Lester Price, sophomore, and Edgar Michael, sophomore, will be available for the court squad next year.

WASHINGTON ALLEY STARS BEAT XENIA

By a margin of 287 pins a Xenia all-star bowling quintet was defeated by the Washington C. H. Imperials in a return inter-city match at Washington Friday night. The winners amassed a three-game total of 2,513 while the Xenia pinsters rolled poorly. Box score:

HADLEY FIELD, NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 2.—National Air Transport Pilot P. Underhill landed here at 4 a. m. today, several hours late from Cleveland, because of a storm which forced him to fly far off his course, officials of the airport reported.

They had received no report from Underhill that he had been forced to land in Connecticut, officials said.

THREE ENTRANTS IN CLASS B DEFEATED; XENIA ELIMINATED

East High Survives; Boys Place In Foul Shooting

(BULLETIN)

Xenia East High School, Greene County's last surviving representative in the Class B division of the sectional tournament at Springfield, was downed by St. Paris after a close battle, 21 to 20 in the second round Saturday morning. East had drawn a bye the first round.

St. Paris, holding victories over Bradford, 30 to 28, and Xenia East, 21 to 20, will next play Logan at 5:35 p. m. Saturday. Logan defeated Holy Angels of Sidney in the same group, 25 to 19 Saturday morning.

In another second round engagement Saturday morning, Centerville, a Montgomery County representative, beat New Madison 36 to 17 and will play the winner of the West Carrollton - Arcanum game at 7 p. m. Saturday.

Four Greene County teams passed out of the picture in the first round of the Class A and Class B sectional basketball tournament at Springfield Friday.

Xenia Central fell before Dayton Stivers, 45 to 12 in a Class A contest. In the Class B division, Spring Valley was eliminated by Rushsylvania, 26 to 15, Bellbrook was beaten by North Hampton, 36 to 19, and Bath Twp., was nosed out by Pleasant Hill, 36 to 32.

The only Greene County representative which weathered the opening round was Xenia East High School, which drew a bye and was scheduled to meet St. Paris Saturday morning.

Surviving teams in the Class A division are Urbana, Sidney, Stivers, Kiser, Fairview, Steele, Chaminade and Roosevelt. It is peculiar that out of six Class A games played Friday, six Dayton schools emerged victorious. Urbana and Sidney drew byes the first round.

In the foul shooting contest being staged in connection with the tournament, two Greene County entrants are tied for second place in the boys' division. Robert Crites, Spring Valley, winner of the free throw contest held in connection with the recent county tourney, made seventeen successful shots out of twenty, while Herbert McKay, Caesarcreek, also connected with seventeen fouls.

The foul shooting contest is being staged at the Springfield Y. M. C. A. gym and was being continued Saturday with eighteen more entries in line to shoot.

TRAINMEN KILLED IN RAIL COLLISION

POTTSVILLE, Pa., March 2.—Two men were instantly killed at St. Clair, near here, early today when thirty-five heavily loaded freight cars ran wild down a steep incline and crashed into an engine and caboose standing in the Reading Railroad yard. The dead:

Guy Frantz, 33, St. Clair, Reading Railroad engineer; Joseph Hartnett, Schuylkill Haven, brakeman. John Howells, 24, Port Carbon, another member of the train crew was taken from the wreckage of the caboost and rushed to a hospital here in a critical condition.

FURTHER RAIN ADDS TO FLOOD MENACE

ATLANTA, Ga., March 2.—Rainfall today in this state and Alabama will bring about extremely serious flood conditions in sections already suffering loss of life and tied-up transportation. Dozens of bridges are already reported weakened and another heavy flow of water will sweep them away.

The loss of life to date, apparently confined to Georgia, has reached nine lives. Alabama, North and South Carolina, and Mississippi have suffered loss, the destruction being confined to washed out roads and bridges, caused by the worst flood conditions in ten years.

Damage to crops has been enormous.

$44,000 Bench Star Goes to Newark

MIKE GAZELLA, above, is baseball's highest priced "sitter." For four years he has graced the bench of the Yankee dugout at a total intake of approximately $44,000, including the proceeds from four full World's Series cuts.

In four years he has played at only rare intervals. His first appearance was in 1923, when he sat out a season and a world series and drew down $11,000, of which $6,200 was series money. In 1924 and '25 he was in the minors, but he returned in 1926 and sat and sat and sat—to the tune of $6,000 and world series dough. He did it again in 1927 and in 1928 he got a thousand extra for polishing the woodwork in addition to the series coin.

Now Mike goes to Newark, where under Tris Speaker's eagle eye, he probably will start doing calisthenics—or something.

DR. BIBLE SPEAKS; CHURCH ORGANIZES CANVASS AT DINNER

Responsibility toward those outside the church, and to the various agencies making up the world-wide work of the denomination, were featured by Dr. Frank Bible, Chicago, central states executive for the Board of Foreign Missions, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. when he addressed the men's dinner meeting at the First Presbyterian Church Friday evening.

Dr. Bible, who was for thirteen years a missionary to China, talked on some of the conditions in that country, his experiences in famine relief work there, and his travels through other countries in missionary labors.

He spoke of the need of support of the various agencies within the church; Christian education, boards of national and foreign missions and pensions. Dr. Bible is visiting all churches in Dayton Presbyterial, preliminary to the annual "Every Member Canvass" March 10.

On that date the local congregation hopes to raise between $5,000 and $6,000 for local and world-wide work of the church.

F. L. Smith was chairman for the dinner meeting, which was followed by a conference beween Dr. Bible and the "Every Member Canvass" committee of which George P. Tiffany is chairman. Mr. Tiffany has organized thirty men of the congregation for the one day canvass.

Dinner Friday evening was served by a committee composed of the circle chairmen in the Ladies' Aid Society.

TAILOR GAGGED, THEN ROBBED

AKRON, March 2.—Bound hand and foot and gagged by two robbers, Joseph Leeper, 65-year-old tailor, nearly strangled to death in his shop here last night. He was rescued by his wife.

Measurements taken by Leeper as the bandits tried on suits before they robbed the tailor may identify them, police said.

The robbers escaped with $17, a watch, and a knife.

Veteran Giant Pitcher Keeps Pace with Youngsters

Jack Scott Regarded as Regular on McGraw Baseballers

JACK SCOTT
(International Newsreel)

LIKE the "old gal" who insists on playing around with the younger set, just to show how young she is, Jack Scott, Phillie cast-off, is cavorting around the training lot with the liveliest of the rookies.

That name cast-off has a vicious sound, but Jack, at age 35, only one year ago was sent to the minors—Toledo, to be exact—by the Phillies, as all through. He hadn't been there long before the Yankees came along with a dazzling offer for the veteran. It was ordained, however, that he return to the big show under John McGraw through one of those arrangements that exists between the Giants and Toledo.

He had served two previous terms with the Giants, doing a nice job of starting and relieving. Weighing 205 and standing six-one, Jack has always known how and why to take care of his physical being and hard training isn't work for him. Scotty spends his winters raising hogs and reports ready to hurl 'em as fast as some pitchers who have a couple of weeks' work under their belts.

Perhaps his fast one has lost some of its hop and his curve is nothing to boast about. He still has control, courage and knowledge of batters. That's a lot more than many pitchers can boast of and ought to come in handy to the Giants.

Anyhow, you've got to take your hat off to the boy. He's getting away with it and more than keeping to the pace of the youngster in spite of his graying hairs.

KIDNAPED CHILD WAS WITH MOTHER

IRONTON, O., March 2—Abducted three days ago from a school building here, Eloise Milan, 8, had been returned to her home today by Elmer Milan, her father.

Milan said he found the girl at Kenova, W. Va., living with Mrs. Jeannette Milan, his divorced wife. He told authorities he had dropped kidnaping charges against his former wife upon her promise never to bother any of her children again.

When the Milans were divorced, the court awarded custody of all the children, two girls and a boy, to the father. But later Edward, 10, declared he wanted to live with his mother and Milan permitted him to do so.

TO HEAR PHYSICIAN IN NARCOTIC PROBE

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 2.—The physician accused of giving morphine prescriptions to Alma Rubens, film actress, will be permitted to testify at his own request in the federal investigation of the narcotic situation here.

Miss Rubens will not appear before the grand jury, her condition being such as to prevent her leaving the state narcotic hospital where she was removed at the request of her family.

Dr. I. Jesse Citron, the physician, was not subpoenaed by the jury but asked to appear. Ricardo Cortez, screen actor and husband of Miss Rubens, and Mrs. Teresa Rubens, her mother, have been called.

MARCH WOLF IN SHEEPSKIN

Decided lamb-like tendencies were exhibited by March, which arrived Friday, and Xenians most sympathetically susceptible again felt faint symptoms of the perennial spring malady.

Saturday's weather, however, did not collaborate effectively with the usual tired working man's afternoon off. Approximately the same temperature is predicted for Sunday with the cooling off process scheduled to continue.

LINEMAN HURT AS AUTO HITS TRUCK

O. Karr, an employe of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co., suffered a broken leg when an auto with an Indiana license collided with a telephone company service truck late Friday afternoon on the Dayton-Fairfield Pike, south of Fairfield.

Karr is a member of the cable splicer's crew. Several other men in the truck were also hurt, but not seriously.

The collision occurred when the Indiana car, swerving to avoid striking a stalled auto occupied by Mrs. W. A. Martin, Osborn, crashed into the truck while traveling at a high rate of speed. The gasoline supply of the Martin car had become exhausted.

R. H. Hunter, driver of the truck, received minor bruises.
